50 years of service

FIFTY YEARS ago Red Cross volunteers C.W. Lee and Col. T.B. Taylor, promoters of the Carmel's first ambulance service, took delivery of 1937 Cadillac ambulance in San Francisco. Upon their return they were welcomed by a large reception of enthusiastic neighbors, donors, friends and the curious, who all jammed the small firehouse to inspect and approve of the goods. Fifty years later the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross still provides ambulance service to the community, maintaining ambulances in Carmel, Carmel Valley and Big Sur. Above, current volunteer members of the Red Cross gathered to help kick off the chapter's 50th year of providing ambulance service (left to right): John Jacoby, a 1970 volunteer who later became a staff engineer with the Carmel Fire Department in 1973; Denise Thompson, a representative of the distaff side of the service, was introduced to the program by another volunteer and subsequently became a staff member as dispatcher-clerk; Ron Prieto, a Carmel native who volunteered for duty in 1976 after attending a fire science class at Carmel High; Armand Zenopian was introduced to the service by Vern Allred Sr. in 1981; when the ambulance first appeared in 1937 Red Cross workers wore "canteen worker" uniforms as modeled by Marjorie Timmins of Carmel; in the '50s and '60s, chapter volunteers wore uniforms such as the one worn by Anne Dittmer. To celebrate the golden anniversary of the chapter's ambulance service, the chapter will hold its annual dinner and election of officers starting at 6 p.m. Thursday, June 25 at Mission Ranch Barn. Tickets are $13 each and are available by calling 624-6921. Ambulance drivers and crews will also be honored. (Alan McEwen photo.)

Pay toilets for Carmel?

Dear Editor:

As I was walking around to see more of the town of Chartres, France, than my husband and I had had time for some years ago, I came across a building with a sign over the door, "W.C. Payants Toiletttes." At the left of the door was a sign advertising souvenirs and snacks also. Intrigued, I went in.

An elderly lady was apparently the proprietor of the small establishment, and sure enough, there were tourist-type souvenirs and snacks, and on the left side doorways for "Men" and "Women" which led into the payants toilettes. I found the one for women neat and clean and with the proper supplies. I think it may have cost 5 or 10 cents to use.

I wondered if Carmel couldn't use something of this kind, along with the new facilities on Junipero and Sixth, and had in mind writing the mayor about them for possible incorporation in his new building if he is ever allowed to build it.

In the meantime, Toots Lagoon seems to be having something of this kind, but free, adjacent to Piccadilly Park. A good idea, I think, considering the droves of tourists looking for such things in town. I suspect it is illegal to charge for these in California, though I see nothing wrong with it if they are exceptionally well taken care of. It seems a good example of the free enterprise system.

Objective analysis

Dear Editor:

In reference to Gunnar Norberg's "Guest Editorial" on the report by Denise Duffy & Associates (Pine Cone, June 4), it is obvious that Mr. Norberg took the report out of context. The study, commissioned by the city, was an objective analysis of the existing conditions of Carmel and a straightforward presentation of facts. The commercialization of Carmel is not the product of the report, as Mr. Norberg implies, but the reverse.

Carmel does have problems, that's obvious. The report points to these problems; now it is up to all of us to find solutions.

Unfair assessment

Dear Editor:

In response to Gunnar Norberg's guest editorial I feel he was unfair in his assessment of the Denise Duffy & Associates Report.

The report only stated the facts and Mr. Norberg chose to react to them on an emotional level. The report was concise and accurate and the firm should be commended for their in-depth presentation.

A rose is a rose...

Dear Editor:

What's in a word? Plenty, as just one word can conjure up many thoughts both positive and negative.

For example: a "rose" makes one think of color, fragrance and beauty; "jazz" brings up rhythm, beat and tempo; "football" makes me think of crowds, excitement and hot dogs; and "Bach" stirs up thoughts of melody, history and greatness. Generally all positive thoughts.

On the other hand there is the word "gun" and I think of fear, terror and death. "Fire" brings up thoughts of destruction and disaster. And there is the word "freeway." All of a sudden I picture concrete, tall buildings, smog, overcrowding and Los Angeles. As a real estate agent showing property along Highway 1, Carmel Knolls Drive and the High Meadows area, I get nothing but negative reactions from potential homebuyers when they hear of the proposed Hatton Canyon "Freeway."

What I propose to Caltrans, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors and to the news media is to change the name to The Hatton Canyon Parkway.

Now "Parkway," that's a nice soft name. Once again I think of nicer things like a flowered trail, greenery and a road between towering trees. We don't need words that make one think negatively about our area.

A precious resource

Dear Editor:

We have been warned of water shortages in the months ahead because there has been insufficient rain and snowfall. Actually this is a normal condition since our state always requires more water than nature provides for its large, naturally arid areas.

Public funds have paid for a huge, expensive system of dams and canals to hold and distribute water, 90 percent of which is delivered to agricultural land owners for only 30 percent of its cost to the taxpayers.

There could be enough water for all our needs if growers were charged the real cost. Farmers would cease using it so abundantly and inefficiently and adopt proven advanced methods of irrigation.

The quantity of stored water is less as the dams are slowly filling with silt. Irreplaceable underground water, laid down for thousands of years, has been pumped out to levels which indicate depletion within 50 years.

Salts, leached from the earth as water passes through the series of systems, are gradually poisoning thousands of irrigated acres. Only more pure water, presently unavailable, can dilute these contaminants.

Legislators must look beyond their next elections and establish realistic, long-term management of our most precious resource. Otherwise, nature will surely reclaim its arid domains, particularly in Southern California, where mindless expansion continues.

A lovely vacation

Dear Editor:

My husband and I have been vacationing in Carmel for a long time but the publicity we have been reading in our Bay Area papers this spring made us wonder if we should go back. It led us to believe that local merchants did not welcome out-of-town visitors for various reasons. We wondered if we should return but return we did and are so glad we did.

Just wanted to tell you that we couldn't have been treated nicer, from the young man at the pharmacy who, one evening, when we were fresh out of pennies, took one out of his own pocket and put it into the till, to the young lady named Joyce at a jewelry store who spent a long time with me helping me find just the right pair of earrings I was looking for, to the manager of the Gallery

EDITOR'S DESK

Will it ever stop?

THEY'RE DOING it to Big Sur again.

Just when you thought it was safe to relax again and enjoy the unmatched beauty and pristine environment of Big Sur, along comes another agency hell-bent on destroying it.

The most recent attempt comes under the heading: "Screening Potential Alternative Geographic Disposal Areas" prepared for the San Joaquin Valley Drainage Program under contract by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. The report was prepared by consulting engineers Brown and Caldwell. (See accompanying story starting on page 4.)

What this all means is that San Joaquin Valley, an area of vast farmlands, is looking for sites to dispose of their often-toxic agricultural wastewater, including cancer-causing selenium. And guess where they determined would be ideal for dumping of these hazardous wastes? Big Sur, of course. Can you think of a better place to dump agricultural waste? Heck, it's too pristine, it must need to be mussed up a little, sort of like the kid in grade school who always had his hair too-neatly combed. He was asking for it.

Not only have these consultants identified the Big Sur coast as an area where wastewater can be dumped (at an alarming rate I may add), but they never even visited the potential sites (from their report):

"Both the screening and ranking processes were carried out on the basis of available information; that is, no on-site data gathering or examination of the sites was undertaken. Obviously, such on-site evaluations would be required before final screening could occur."

Obviously. They must have gotten the same "available information" as California Sen. Pete Wilson, another transgressor.

And, not only would there be dumping, but a massive pipeline system would have to be built, over fields, over hill, over dale, and alongside Highway 1 to the "potential drainage sites." ("On your left you'll see the famous Bixby Creek Bridge, and on your right, the Great San Joaquin Valley Wastewater Pipeline"? I think not.)

Fortunately, at this point the report is just a study to screen potential geographic areas and includes the Mojave Desert and the San Francisco Bay area, but knowing how the federal government operates (especially with Donald "Let 'em Use Sunscreen" Hodel at the helm of the Interior Department), and the desperation of the San Joaquin Valley to dump their waste somewhere (look what happened to Kesterson Reservoir), it wouldn't surprise anyone if they tried to carry it through.

To paraphrase Walter Wong, county environmental health director: If they're crazy enough to recommend Big Sur for dumping in the first place, they're crazy enough to carry it through.

Will it ever stop? Let's hope so, once and for all.

Americana who was most courteous even though he understood we were just looking, to the waitress named Ellen at the Rio Grill, who couldn't have treated us better, to the friendly receptionist at city hall who willingly answered all our questions, to the helpful librarians who were always willing to assist, and to the friendly staff at the Sandpiper Inn who made us feel so at home.

Thank you, Carmel, for another lovely vacation.

Clarification

THE CARMEL Pine Cone would like to clarify a statement attributed to 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser

Kauffman in last week's article on Rancho San Carlos.

The statement, "Strasser Kauffman was adamant about Rancho San Carlos not spreading onto any property within the Carmel Valley."

"We will not allow him to build on one vacant lot of record," should have included the statement:

"Rancho San Carlos poses legal ramifications far beyond its own boundaries. It must be recognized that, under the new Carmel Valley Master Plan, any sizable increase of traffic onto Carmel Valley Road coming out of Rancho San Carlos will trigger an automatic moratorium on building anywhere throughout the entire valley. In light of Monterey County's assurances to Judge (Richard) Silver and the public, we cannot and will not permit development of Rancho San Carlos to threaten legal lots of record in Carmel Valley."

A PROPOSED 1,200- to 1,500-seat theater at the south end of Sunset Center — as shown by this architect's model — may come before the voters this November if the Carmel City Council approves the measure requested by the Friends of Sunset Center last week. The ballot measure would be an advisory vote only and would not be binding.

The model is currently on display at the Sunset Center.

Supporters of theater ask for an advisory vote

By DAVID LELAND

DESPITE A recent decision by the Carmel Planning Commission finding a proposed theater at Sunset Center not fitting with the city's general plan, supporters of that project have come out in favor of an advisory vote hoping for a clearer picture.

The Friends of Sunset Center last week drafted a letter to the Carmel City Council asking it to request the Monterey County Elections Department to include the advisory vote on its Nov. 3 ballot.

At hand is a 1,200- to 1,500-seat theater with an estimated price tag between $10 million and $15 million, according to the Friends of Sunset Center.

The Friends of Sunset Center are proposing to pay for construction costs and hope to have an endowment to maintain the theater, according to Burney Threadgill, vice chairman for the Friends.

An advisory vote is a non-binding measure and can only be used as an indicator of public sentiment.

The issue is tentatively scheduled to be heard at the council's July 7 meeting.

In order for the matter to get on the November ballot two things must occur. First, the city council must agree that it wants the issue put before the voters, then it must be determined whether it will fit on the ballot.

The cost would be picked up by the city, paid for from its administrative budget. The cost would be 75 cents per registered voter, as opposed to $1.35 in a regularly scheduled election.

It is unclear who would be voting on the issue, that will be up to the council to decide, according to City Atty. Don Freeman.

The council's options range from only the city of Carmel taking part in the measure to any and all of the county.

If the council wishes to keep the vote only in Carmel, the price would be $2,973, with 3,964 registered voters on the county's rolls.

Mayor Clint Eastwood has come out in favor of Carmel residents having a chance to decide the theater's fate.

"I think it should be a Carmel-only vote," he said. "I think the people that are directly affected by it should be voting."

The second thing that must happen if the advisory vote is to go to the people is for the county to determine if there is room on the ballot.

November's election is a consolidated one, meaning several districts combine on one ballot to increase voter turnout.

It is too early to forecast what districts will be on the ballot or if there will be room for the theater advisory vote if the council approves it, according to June Payne, a county elections clerk.

THE FRIENDS of Sunset Center's decision requesting an advisory vote comes in the wake of two differing aspects regarding the proposed theater.

In late May, the planning commission found the proposed Stanton Theater at Sunset Center was too big for Carmel.

At that time, the commissioners said their main concern was insufficient parking in the area considered for the large theater.

But at the same meeting, the commission also found that a large, underground parking garage at the north end of Sunset Center was in conformance with the general plan.

But even though the commission voted down the theater, some of the commissioners said they believed the matter ultimately should be put to the voters.

"When you have a project like this, I think it should be put to a referendum," said Commissioner Bruce Roberts at May's meeting.

Again, an advisory vote is not a referendum. A referendum is binding and would require a separate action by the council.

Chairman Ken White, who was the sole vote in favor of the theater, said he thinks there is more at hand with the theater than meets the eye.

"I voted for principle," he said. "This town was founded by artists. It was founded in culture; I don't want to see Carmel lose its culture. If it does, we'll be no more than a shopping center."

Also, Dorothea Roberts, who testified at the planning commission meeting that there was insufficient parking for a theater and thus opposed the project, said she also feels the issue should come before the people.

"I'll be very pleased if it gets on the ballot," she said.

The other aspect the Friends are dealing with is a feasibility study released in April, which finds the majority (72 percent) of respondents favoring the theater.

Some residents have expressed doubt whether enough Carmelites (75) were contacted by the Peabody Marketing Group that conducted the survey. But those numbers reflect a scientific survey, much like the 400 families nationwide picked by Nielsen to come up with television ratings.

With that in mind, the Carmel Cultural Commission this week forwarded its report regarding the feasibility study to the city council this week.

The commission generally favors the results of the survey, but recommended that an environmental impact report be put together, which would study traffic impacts on the neighborhood.

THE CULTURAL commission also appeared to favor an advisory vote and at least one member spoke in favor of actively supporting such a measure.

"We've been taking timid steps," said Lewis Heniford. "Ultimately we must get it (theater) before the people."

As a rule, the commission serves only as an advisory body to the council and takes little action on its own.

With regard to parking, Richard Tyler, Sunset Center director, told the commission that just because there may be 1,500 seats in the auditorium that does not mean an equal number of cars will arrive for each show.

Statistics show that for each car coming to the theater, there would be 3.4 people, he said.

Tyler added that the economic benefits for the city could be considerable if a large theater is built.

The national average is for each dollar spent on an admission ticket, there is another $3.35 spent in the community, he said.

For example, if a person buys a $10 ticket, more than $30 dollars will find its way into the hands of Carmel merchants.

But even though the Friends are getting a favorable response thus far regarding an advisory vote, the burden of delay weighs on Virginia Stanton.

It was Stanton's late husband, architect Robert Stanton, who first introduced the theater expansion 14 years ago.

"We've been doing this so long; I'm sort of fed up with politics," she said. "I'm just terribly disappointed. Where else can we turn?"

Stanton said she is prepared to launch a campaign supporting the theater if the council approves the measure.

"I'm both disappointed and optimistic," she said.

Another stumbling block created by the nebulous status of the theater is it is hard to raise funds when in limbo.

"It's hard to ask people for money when you don't have approval from the city," Threadgill said.

Time running out on claims in Bank of Carmel closure

By NANCY HILLS

SHAREHOLDERS OF Carmel Bancorp., the holding company for the Bank of Carmel, better hurry if they want to participate in a settlement.

Claims must be filed by Monday, June 22, with the United States Federal Court Clerk on a claim form, explained attorney George Schisler. The forms should be submitted to Clerk of the U.S. District Court, P.O. Box 990, Corte Madera, CA 94925 or taken to the federal courthouse itself.

Schisler is an attorney with the San Jose law firm of Jackson, Tufts, Cole & Black, which is representing the 1984 shareholders.

Schisler said if contacted at 998-1952 in San Jose, he can overnight mail claim forms to those who wish to file.

Salinas attorney Mark Dwyer, representative for Bank of Carmel directors, also has forms available. Dwyer's office is located at 333 Salinas St., Suite 21, Salinas, or he or his legal assistant, Ginger Mitoza, can be contacted at 428-1414.

Legal notices have been run in most of the local papers, Schisler explained, and personal correspondence has been sent to all shareholders at the address given when their shares were purchased.

Federal Judge Richard Aguilar approved the settlement June 5 in San Jose Federal Court which excludes the directors and officers of the bank, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the bank's insurance company from collecting in this lawsuit.

Though everyone else who owned stock in Carmel Bancorp. by May 4, 1984 is qualified to participate in the settlement, the $1.2 million fund will be divided, at different compensation rates, among three groups, Schisler explained. Those groups are:

- Shareholders who purchased stock in the bank's 1984 stock offering and who filed a lawsuit against the bank within a year of its closing. This group will receive approximately 50 cents on the dollar for the amount they invested.

This group receives more, Schisler explained, because they filed their lawsuits before the statute of limitations ran out on certain securities violations.

- Shareholders who purchased stock in the 1984 offering, but did not file a lawsuit. This group will receive approximately 30 cents for every dollar invested in the 1984 stock offering.

- Shareholders who purchased before 1984 will receive about 3 cents for every dollar invested on their pre-1984 stock. This group receives less because they purchased their stock prior to the securities violations which led to the bank's closing in May 1984.

It will take at least two months for shareholders who file to receive their money, Schisler explained. Validity of the claims must be checked and it will take about three weeks to a month just to enter the names into a computer.

THE $1.2 million fund, minus approximately $300,000 in attorneys' fees, will be divided among the 529 stockholders who file by June 22. The fund was paid by insurers of the bank, directors and the bank's attorneys.

Directors and officers of the bank who agreed to the settlement include attorney George Walker; executors of the late Robert Talbott's estate, Alan Williams, Kenneth Gould, Isabel Tostevin, Clayton Neill, Jr., Robert Morris, Zigmont (Jody) LeTowt III, Carroll McKee, Harley Warner, Thomas Abert, Donald Nelson, Earl Martine, Robert Boynton and Richard Fritz.

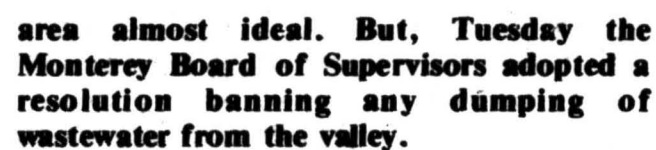

The settlement does not affect other lawsuits still in progress that were filed by the FDIC against other alleged securities violations. It also does not affect the criminal action against bank officers Boynton and Fritz and Leonard Levy, a Newport Beach entrepreneur.

Former Bank of Carmel chief executive Boynton, loan officer Fritz, and Levy are charged with 19 felony counts of wire fraud and false statements on loans. It was a $6 million dollar overdraft to Levy that prompted the closing of the bank in May 1984.

and seals?" wrote Josoff, head of the Friends of the Big Sur Coast.

STRANGE AS it may seem, the decisions by the government on where to dump the wastewater have been carried out only with the help of maps and other data — there have been no personal inspections.

"Both the screening and ranking process were carried out on the basis of available information," the consultant's report states. "That is no on-site data gathering or examinations of the sites was undertaken."

That type of information gathering prompted Wong's amazement as he addressed the board earlier this week.

"Anyone who is crazy enough to make such a recommendation as to dump such a large amount of toxic wastewater in Big Sur is crazy enough to implement it," he said.

Strasser Kauffman said that the lack of personal attention is often a problem when outside agencies deal with Big Sur but that often changes upon inspection.

"Most public officials, once they get out there and move around, understand our objections," she said.

Big Sur residents are also outraged and flabbergasted by the proposal.

"It hits home too close for any silence on my part," wrote resident ecologist Margaret Owings to the board.

In her letter, Owings describes the large number of sea lions, elephant seals and otters in the area directly below her home.

"I can hardly believe that these mammals would not suffer beyond measure," she said.

"The Bureau of Land Management has made a serious mistake with irrigation causing the selenium. They simply cannot solve it by passing it on."

The report was initially put together for the San Joaquin Valley Drainage Program, which was established in mid-1984 as a cooperative effort between state and federal agencies.

The purposes of the program are to investigate problems associated with San Joaquin drainage wastewater contaminated with selenium, toxic chemicals, and pesticides and to formulate, evaluate, and recommend alternatives for immediate and long-term management of the problem of adequate disposal.

The idea of yet another outside agency invading the Big Sur coastline also invoked the wrath of Big Sur resident and activist Jim Josoff.

"Ten years of working out land use plans, eight years of fighting off one or another attempt to federalize the coast, and now some Baneful Lunatic Misanthropes think we should sit still while they sprinkle something other than stardust for our abalone, otters

IN ADDITION to a resolution opposing disposal of wastewater, the board also authorized Chairwoman Strasser Kauffman to:

- Seek federal legislation to prohibit the discharge of San Joaquin Valley agricultural wastewater along the the Big Sur coast.
- Contact state legislature to seek state legislation which will prohibit the discharge of wastewater around Big Sur.

• Contact the San Joaquin Drainage Program Policy Committee to request representation on the Citizen Advisory Committee from Monterey and Santa Cruz counties if the Big Sur coast and Monterey Bay continue to be considered as disposal sites for San Joaquin Valley agricultural drainage.

ALSO KEEPING a close watch on the possibility of dumping wastewater in the area is the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG).

"We will oppose any alternative which includes any proposal for dumping in Monterey County," said Janet Brennan, AMBAG senior regional planner.

Brennan said AMBAG also supports a proposed federal legislation, in part sponsored by Rep. Leon Panetta, which prohibits the Secretary of the Interior from spending money for dumping wastewater from the San Joaquin Valley into coastal waters.

Brennan said the wastewater should be treated at the source instead of looking for other places to dump the problem.

Church requests permit to inter cremated remains

By NANCY HILLS

"ASHES to ashes, dust to dust," is The Bible's proclaimed destiny for creatures of the flesh, but will Carmel accept that fate?

That question could be answered soon by the Carmel Planning Commission when it reviews a permit for a columbarium at All Saint's Episcopal Church.

The church, located on the southwest corner of Ninth and Dolores, asked the planning commission June 10 to consider allowing a repository for cremated remains on the church grounds or in the sanctuary near the altar.

The columbarium, if approved, would not be the first facility for interment in Carmel. The Carmel Mission on Rio Road has a cemetery on its property and Father Junipero Serra's tomb is located in the building.

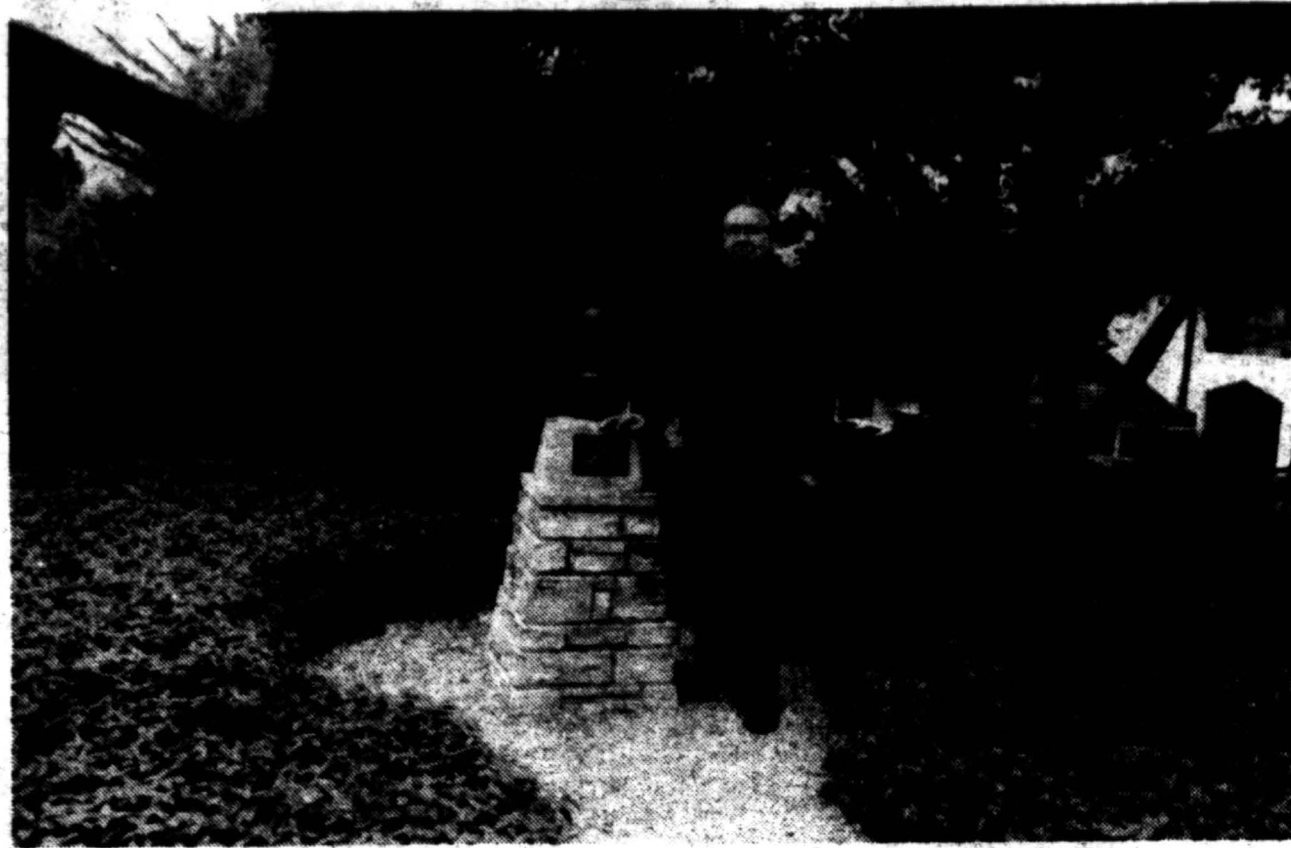

The commission referred the matter to the land use committee for further study after Planning Director Diane White said there is no city code that relates to this use unless there is some physical change in the building or grounds.

Chairman Ken White also stated he believed the residents of the neighborhood should be heard from before the commission makes a determination.

Father Allan Wolter, representing the church, said the issue will be presented to the parishioners after the planning commission rules on the use permit.

A columbarium is "a repository for the cremated remains of the departed" according to the church application and may be in "wall niches or in the ground."

"With the growing use of cremation, many people wish to have some repository here in Carmel, in compliance with an ages-old tradition, someplace where they put flowers and near where they attend worship," Wolter, representing the church, told the commissioners. "It would be only for members of All Saints', not a place for public interment."

FATHER ALLAN Wolter of All Saints' Episcopal Church stands at a possible site for a proposed columbarium: "a repository for cremated remains of the departed," for which the church is seeking a permit from the city. (Holly McFarland photo.)

If they choose an exterior columbarium, it would be a small one, Wolter said, standing in the courtyard out of the public's sight. An interior columbarium would be in the wall next to the altar, also out of the public's sight.

Commissioner Bill Brown, however, questioned Wolter about the repository being "dedicated land." Brown's family owns mortuaries and one cemetery.

Brown explained later that cemeteries have special laws that govern their removal. Bodies or remains cannot be moved without the permission of every family member, a complicated process.

"If the church moves, the city could have this columbarium right in the middle of the residential district," he said.

If All Saints' Church moved, Brown explained, every family member from California to Timbuktu must be notified and written permission obtained before family member's ashes can be moved, according to laws on cemeteries.

Wolter told Brown during the meeting that All Saint's Church has enough room for "generations to come" and "no one even knows how long Carmel will be around."

"Have a little faith, Mr. Brown," Wolter admonished.

Wolter added that the church would agree to care for the ashes "in perpetuity"—forever.

John Gill, executive officer of the state cemetery board, told The Carmel Pine Cone that the columbarium would be considered dedicated land and come under the rules of cemeteries. However, since it is in a church, it would be exempt from state licensing.

Members of All Saints' Church are now interred in Pacific Grove and Monterey cemeteries, Wolter said, and many would like to have their loved ones closer and in the church of their choice.

MURIEL POWERS, a widow and member of All Saints' since 1965, said she would have found a columbarium at the church a comfort years ago.

"I lost my husband quite young," Powers said. "My husband died in 1969 and is buried in Monterey Cemetery. It would have meant a great deal to me to have put his ashes in the wall of the church where I attend services. As a Christian, I would like to have his remains in the church I go to."

Powers feels so strongly about the columbarium, that she would move her husband's ashes from Monterey to Carmel.

"A lot of people now scatter the ashes then don't have a place to grieve. That's an important part of the grieving process," she added.

Having the remains close by also is important to those who "strongly believe in the Mass (as said in the Anglican church)," Powers said. The Mass speaks of "uniting (with God) of loved ones who have gone on."

Both Powers and another parishioner, Barbara Kynaston, see no reason why anyone would object to the columbarium.

"It's nothing like a great big building. It's a small thing for the parishioners. Comparatively few people will use it," Kynaston said, and added it will not be seen from the street or public way.

"I, myself, would rather be buried there (All Saints')," Kynaston said, adding she doesn't like cemeteries in general, but this small columbarium doesn't bother her.

Coalition kicks off its campaign for new dam

By NANCY HILLS

A DIVERSE collection of peninsula politicians, their representatives and concerned citizens gathered together June 15 to officially "kick off" a campaign for the proposed New San Clemente Dam on the Carmel River.

The group, called The Coalition for a Secure Water Supply, plans to educate people about the water supply on the peninsula and why they feel a dam is the only answer for the area's water supply problems.

Participants in the kick-off even included Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood; Monterey Peninsula Water Management District directors Nick Lombardo, Pat Bernardi, Karin Strasser Kauffman (Monterey County 5th District Supervisor) and Chairman Dick Heuer; environmental activist Earl Moser; and Pacific Grove Councilman Bob Russell.

During the brief ceremony on a dry portion of the river bed they held up a banner that stated "Let's Build the Dam" for an audience of television cameras, reporters and photographers.

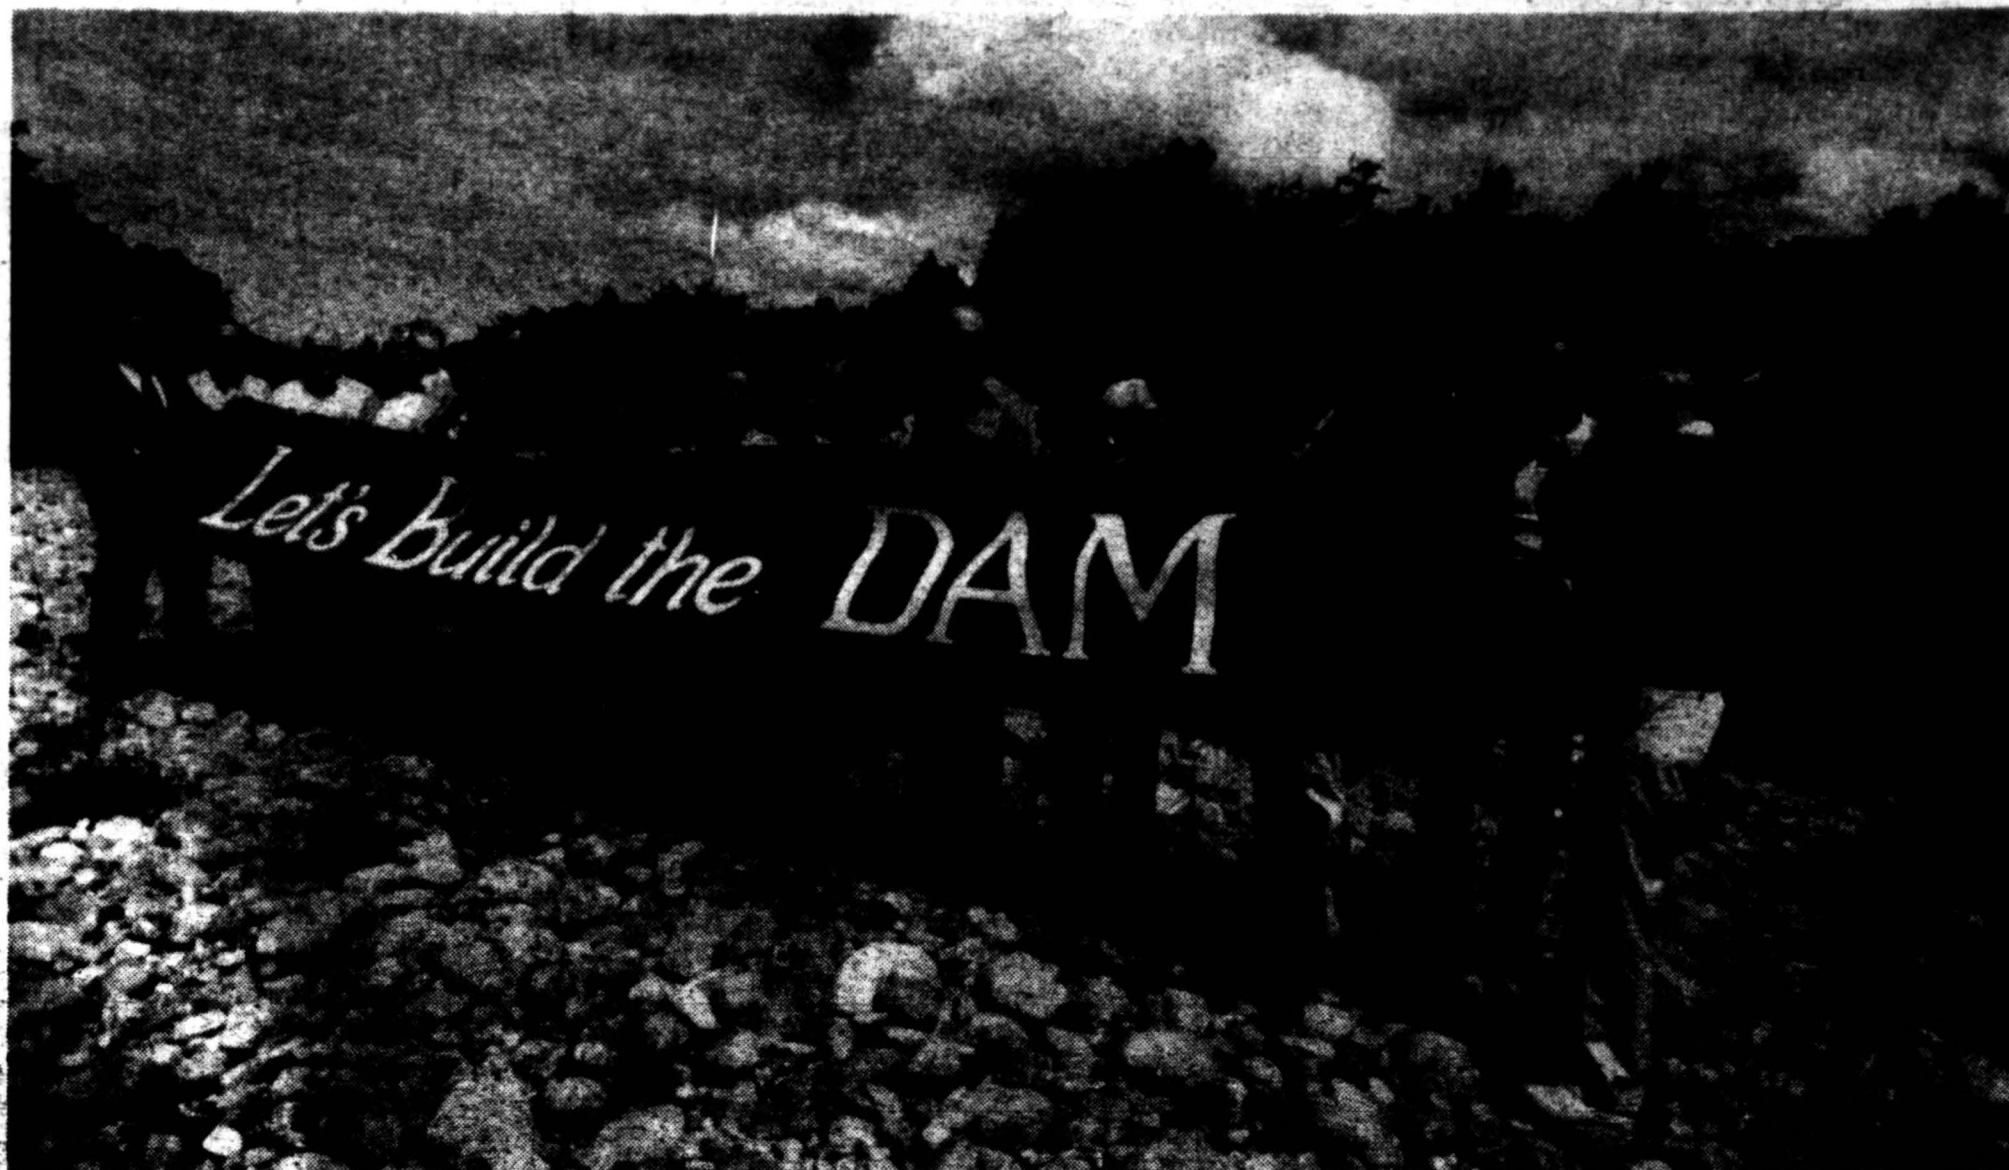

Coalition chairman Russell said that the group surveyed about 500 people within water management district boundaries and found that 65 to 70 percent were in favor of building the dam. A majority of respondents listed water as the most important problem the peninsula faces today, he added.

Russell said issue was not growth or no growth, but a secure water supply for the peninsula.

"I find we've got people from the limited growth groups involved with the coalition," Russell said.

People who did not live on the peninsula 10 years ago have no memory of the severe rationing that happened during the drought, he said. They're the ones they really want to reach, he added.

Moser stated he wanted the dam "not to encourage growth, but to have a year-round flow in the river," which he believes will restore the Carmel Valley and river environment.

THE COALITION for a Secure Water Supply and others interested in a "yes" vote this November for a new dam on the Carmel

River officially kicked off their campaign June 15 to educate the public and bring atten-

After the ceremony, Eastwood said he is interested in the dam because of water quality as well as supply.

The water management district plans to release a draft environmental impact report on the project in early September and will conduct a non-binding advisory vote on the project in November 1987. A formal bond issue vote will be late in 1988 or early 1989. If approved the dam will be completed in 1992 or 1993.

"Our district has been working hard to design an all-around dam," Heuer said while holding the banner. Heuer said it would be one that satisfies the peninsula's environmental needs, drought reserve and provides for the planned growth on the peninsula.

Rec program goes into high gear for summer

By DAVID LELAND

THERE'S REALLY no excuse for the youth of Carmel to be bored this summer. It seems that this year the city's recreation department has gone to great lengths to provide fun in its summer program.

Gone are the days when youngsters were dropped off by their parents in the wee hours of the morning to while away the hours until mom or dad returned that evening. Now it's fun, fun, fun.

There are two different programs offered at Carmel River School: the summer activity camp and special interest classes.

Last year the activity camp was primarily a drop-in sort of affair, with many parents leaving their kids off when the center opened at 7:30 a.m. and picking them up at 6 p.m. when the camp closed for the day.

But that's a long time for not only the youth but also the supervisors to have no activities planned for the campers, said Beth Kastrup, city recreation director.

So in her first summer of programming since taking her position last November, Kastrup has provided a schedule that will keep all parties busy.

"We're trying to provide more structure through planned programming," she said. "We're also attempting to get other agencies in the area involved."

An example of this is the special weekly summer reading program offered at the Harrison Memorial Library.

Other activities include arts and crafts, playground games, sports and movies.

While about 75 parents have already signed up their children for the camp, Kastrup said she expects that number to rise as summer continues.

The camp runs into August and will accommodate any number of those wishing to take part, Kastrup said.

And here's the best part. For parents buying 150 hours of camptime for $150, the price equals only $1 per hour.

All programs offered at River School are open to children ages 5 through 12. They are co-sponsored by the city of Carmel and the Carmel Unified School District.

For parents wishing to enroll their children in special classes, the recreation center has put together a nifty assortment of options.

Offered at various times throughout the summer are:

• Painting and Drawing. This basic course will stress line, texture, form, space and color. Students will learn how to combine the techniques through fun and interesting class projects.

The class will meet from 1 to 2:30 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, July 20 through August 14 in the art room at River School.

The class is open to students ages 6 and older with a fee of $30. The instructor will be GERALYN MAUL.

• Nature Crafts. Using materials found in nature, the students will be taught to "see" nature as line, form, texture, space and color.

The class will meet from 1 to 2 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, June 22 to July 17 in the art room at River School.

The class is open to students ages 5 to 7 with a fee of $20. The instructor will be GERALYN MAUL.

• Arts and Crafts. This course is designed to provide students with a variety of media opportunities to express themselves. Stressed will be self-discipline, individualism and spontaneity.

The class will meet from 4 to 5 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, on two different sessions. Session I: June 22 to July 10 and Session II: July 13 to July 31.

The classes are open for students ages 6 to 10 with a fee of $20 and will meet in the art room at River School. The instructor will be CHAD HAMMACK.

• Decorative Crafts. Instruction of decorative crafts for use in and around the home. Students will have the opportunity to make such projects as floral wreaths, mirror etching and candle making.

The class will meet from 1 to 3 p.m. on Tuesday, June 23 to July 28.

The classes are open to students ages 9 and over with a fee of $30 and will meet in the art room at River School. The instructor will be GERALYN MAUL.

• Printmaking. Students will be provided instruction in the art of printmaking through a variety of projects such as silk screening, block printing and mirror etching.

The classes will meet from 1 to 3 p.m. on Thursdays, June 25 to July 30.

The classes are open to students ages 9 and older for a fee of $30 and will meet in the art room at River School. The instructor will be GERALYN MAUL.

• Beginning Karate. The class is an excellent way to start the child on the road to better physical and mental condition.

The classes will meet from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday on two separate sessions. Session I: June 22 to July 17 and Session II: July 20 to August 14.

• Junior Golf. This program provides basic golf instruction with an emphasis on sound fundamentals.

There will be two sessions offered. Session I: will meet Mondays June 22 through July 13 and Session: July 20 to Aug. 10.

Class times will depend on the student's age. For ages 6 to 11 classes will meet from 3 to 4 p.m. For those 12 and older the time will be 4 to 5:30 p.m.

There is a $25 fee and classes will meet at the Poppy Hills Golf Course. The instructor will be JACK GUIO, PGA Class A Professional.

For further information call the recreation department at 626-1255.

In addition, the blankets are used to cover bird cages and we even use some of the towels for the various rodents we have in our care."

Youth center weightroom ready for grand opening

By DAVID LELAND

AFTER ALMOST a year in the making, the weightroom at the Carmel Youth Center is ready for its grand opening.

The official ribbon-cutting ceremony with Mayor Clint Eastwood will take place at 10 a.m. Saturday, June 20 at the Carmel Youth Center, located at Fourth Avenue and Torres Street.

The project initially began last summer after Eastwood noticed the lower portion of the youth center had a large area being used for storage.

Eastwood pictured something a little more in line with helping the youth of Carmel.

The mayor pitched in $20,000 out of his own pocket for refurbishing the dilapidated basement and then called on some friends in the bodybuilding business — namely Arnold Schwarzenegger and Southern California gym owner Joe Gold.

Those folks then contacted some of their friends, and last April about $35,000 worth of equipment was delivered to the youth center.

That included free weights, a jungle system and a selectorized machine. Plus, there is all-new matting on the floor with more equipment due to arrive soon.

Eastwood, true to fashion, is not willing to take much credit for his efforts thus far.

"The success of the weightroom remains how it is used," he said. "That's the real success."

In order to stimulate activity in the new weightroom, Beth Kastrop, city rec director, has declared June as a month to enjoy the facilities for free.

Beginning in July, membership dues for using the weightroom will be $10 for one month, $50 for six months and $100 a year.

The summertime hours are Tuesday through Friday 1 to 3 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m.

Ages 13 through 18 are allowed to use the gym.

YOUTH CENTER officials are quick to point out that the youth of Carmel are not going to simply be turned loose with no supervision on the weights. Quite the contrary.

Guiding classes and certification in the weightroom will be physical education teacher Don Covington.

Covington brings with him to the youth center some impeccable credentials, which include working with gymnast Joan Moore in the 1972 Olympics.

For the past five years he has taught at Briarcliff Academy and is the coach for most sports offered there.

Covington believes he has the necessary qualifications for helping Carmel's youth advance with the weights at a proper pace.

"Training and conditioning are my specialties," said the 44-year-old Covington.

Covington said each person signing up for classes will first be given a critique designed to find out how much he should be lifting.

"The major mistake with young people is they try to lift as much as they can," he said. "Injuries occur from using too much weight."

He said when youths begin lifting at ages 13 through 15, the emphasis should be on developing form and technique.

When they reach the ages of 16 through 18 the lifters can begin putting more weight together on the machines. Coinciding with that time, the students are beginning to play football and wrestling, he said.

After being checked out on the machines, the youths will be given a sheet with their workout printed on it. That will be posted on the gym wall for them to refer to.

In addition to working out, Covington said there will be a poster of the human body with all its muscles for the youths to check out and see what's going on with them.

"It will be a full education for them," he said. Covington added that he began lifting when he was in eighth-grade and continued throughout his college days.

He has also begun a letter-writing campaign letting all the physical education coaches in the district know that the weightroom is alive and ready to be used.

CARMEL YOUTH Center Weightroom instructor Don Covington brings with him to Carmel about 30 years of weight lifting and physical education experience. Here, he

PEBBLE BEACH NOTES

Plans for an elementary school at Pebble Beach have been completed and will be submitted for bids shortly. The design was worked up by B.R. Maybeck. Maybeck is well known as the architect who designed the Palace of Fine Arts at the Exposition in 1915 and who also worked out the color scheme for the Exposition. It is planned to take care of both physical and mental development of the children. In addition to the regular class instruction certain afternoons will be devoted to instruction in swimming, golf, horseback riding and walks. The school will have the advantage of the Del Monte Properties Company's golf, swimming, tennis and riding instructors.

FISTICUFFS ON OCEAN AVE.

To the great edification of spectators, but happily with no great damage to themselves, Police Commissioner Joseph A. Burge and one W.K. Bassett, engaged in fisticuffs on Ocean Avenue not far from the post office Friday afternoon. Bassett is said to be the editor of a Carmel weekly newspaper. Bystanders who heard the preliminary argument leading up to the exchange of blows, reported that Burge appeared to be taking exception to something Bassett had said about him in his paper. Or not so much what was said, but that the editor did not "say it like a gentleman."

CITY RUNS FLAG IDEA DOWN POLE FOR NOW

Oh say can you see - a city flag for Carmel? Some city council members could. Others could not. But the matter of what kind of flag would fly where in Carmel aroused a star-spangled debate at Monday's city council meeting.

The considerations were threefold: Does the city want a city flag? If it does, who should design it? If purchased, where would it fly?

Devendorf Park currently hoists a U.S. flag, a California state flag and a United Nations flag. That's three flags and three poles. The addition of a Carmel city flag means the playing of taps for one of the current banners.

But which one?

Councilman David Hughes suggested the whole matter be forwarded to a special cultural commission committee. The council agreed, but not before Helen Arnold asked, "What are we going to use a city flag for?"

The council is considering the purchase of six nylon flags at a cost of $425.00.

Arnold argued flying a city flag would be "flaunting our own citiness."

MORE CARMEL RIVER STORAGE NEEDED

TO PRESERVE STEELHEAD, REPORT SAYS

The human population is not the only one which will be profoundly affected by the outcome of the debate over another dam on the upper Carmel River.

To present and future residents of the Monterey Peninsula, the Carmel River Aquifer is the major source of drinking water. But to the thousands of steelhead which migrate annually, the river is "home."

Added to the already-complicated debate over the politics and economics of construction of another dam on the Carmel River is a sobering bit of scientific advice for which the district paid $90,000:

Unless some kind of additional storage for Carmel River water is provided, the steelhead population will be all but wiped out.

That was the core of a report to the district board of directors by D.W. Kelley & Associates, aquatic biology consultants hired by the district to study the steelhead fisheries on the Carmel River.

CARMEL'S COMMUNITY and Cultural Commission will meet in a special session Friday.

Marketing of density credits to be discussed

A PUBLIC meeting to discuss the marketing of Transfer of Density Credits (TDC) in Big Sur will be held at 3 p.m. Friday, June 19 in the Health Department Conference Room at 1200 Aguajito Road (Monterey Court House).

The session is being scheduled by the Monterey County Departments of Planning and Intergovernmental Affairs and will be chaired by 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman.

The TDC program is based on the policies of the Big Sur Land Use Plan relating to development on lots in the critical viewshed of the coast. The critical viewshed is that area of the coast visible from Highway 1 and other public viewing areas.

The county's TDC program provides a mechanism by which an owner of a lot which is otherwise buildable in the critical viewshed may receive a transfer of development credit for that lot to another less environmentally sensitive location elsewhere in Big Sur. The TDC program also provides for the establishment and designation of "receiver sites" in the Big Sur area - parcels to which development credit from lots in the critical viewshed may be transferred. The Coastal Conservancy has encumbered $1 million for 1986-87 for Monterey County to act as buyer of last resort for density credits.

Strasser Kauffman said, "Unlike many other jurisdictions, Monterey County is determined to balance strict environmental protection with basic property rights. There is no more critical area to aim for this goal than the spectacular Big Sur Coast."

DOLLARS & SENSE

By Anthony Piazza & Marshall Bloom

Another pretty girl

Dear Boys:

Well, Calpurnia and I are back in Nebraska but our minds and a whole bunch of money are back on the Monterey Peninsula. We certainly enjoyed meeting both of you and your wives. Don't forget you promised to visit us. We can't offer you any calamari or artichokes, but a steak dinner at Kelly's Bar, Grill, and Bait Shop is something not to be missed.

Say, boys, before I forget, would you go on with that story you were telling me about all the prettiest girls at the bar being talked about but not talked to and how in investments certain ideas are thought about but not acted upon. We were interrupted at dinner that night at the Highlands Inn just after you talked about the desirability of insurance investments after tax reform.

My best to everyone, especially that jazz addict you introduced me to named Mac.

Sincerely,
Halliburton G. Funnel

Dear Halliburton:

It's too bad we weren't able to finish our discussion in person, but we'll push ahead by long distance mail because we think the subject is more than merely important, it's crucial.

Of all the "pretty girls" investors should get to know personally, Hal, the most rewarding has to be a way to invest and not an investment, per se. Employer-sponsored retirement plans remain the beauty-contest winner that folks must get to know if they're going to prosper down the road. Congress has turned the tables on all our lifetime concerns with write-offs and shelters. And if you think those loopholes will be back any time in the foreseeable future, you probably also believe that dinosaurs are not dead, just hiding out in New Jersey.

Why all this fuss about employer-sponsored retirement plans? Very simple. For most working couples the $4,000 combined IRA write-off no longer exists. Congress is trying to do a major piece of social engineering by now stressing the need for every boss to belly up to the bar and pick up the tab for the retirement needs of the American worker.

Does that mean it's a costly new concern for the boss? Not necessarily. Employers have to talk to experts called pension administrators to find out which, among the wide variety of plans available, would be best suited for his employees, as well as his or her own business plan. Basically, however, the employer should consider two major benefits in implementing or upgrading a company retirement plan.

Number One. The money an employer or employees place in a retirement plan is a real write-off. As we said, few true write-offs exist anymore.

Number Two. A company with a retirement plan certainly has a better shot at creating and maintaining employee loyalty.

After you've implemented your retirement plan, that's when you want to think about what you want to invest in, stocks, bonds, mutual funds, etc. Of course, Hal, you know who to see about that, and we'll even help you find a pension administrator.

Well, old Nebraska buddy, the two of us can't wait to return the visit. Tell Kelly to thaw out a couple of his best T-bones.

Sincerely,
Piazza & Bloom

Goodwill trailer to visit Mid Valley

SUPPLEMENTING THEIR permanent "Attended Donation Station" in Carmel Rancho Center, Goodwill Industries is bringing their rotating trailer to Mid Valley on June 18 for a one-month stay.

The blue and white trailer with the "Smiling G" logo will be open at the Mid Valley Shopping Center every day until July 15, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 1:30 to 5 p.m. with an attendant to assist with unloading and to provide receipts.

Goodwill's "rotating" trailer makes periodic visits to special communities like Mid Valley at the request of residents, to make it convenient for them to bring their donations to a spot near their homes.

"When the season changes, we all do housecleaning," says Dave Ratliff who manages both the donation stations and stores for Goodwill. "Everyone has things in closets, cupboards and garages that aren't used much if at all and Goodwill can put those unused things to work to help handicapped people become self-supporting."

Donations to Goodwill are tax deductible when itemizing, and donors are urged to visit the donation station during attended hours to get their receipts and to ensure that their gifts reach Goodwill in good condition.

For information on pickup of things too large or heavy to bring to the attended donation station, call Goodwill at 646-8567.

Knowledge of CPR could save lives

MORE THAN 70 percent of all CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) rescues occur in the home on an individual known by the rescuer.

Statistics show that more than 650,000 people in the United States died from heart attacks in 1986 and that heart disease is the leading cause of death in Monterey County.

On the other hand CPR saves more than 250 lives a day; the more people that know

CPR, the more lives that can be saved.

With that in mind the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross offers CPR classes twice a month all year. The following classes are offered:

- 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, July 11.
- 6 to 10 p.m. Monday, July 27 and Wednesday, July 29.

Classes are held at the Carmel Red Cross house at Eighth and Dolores. Classes include demonstrations and teaching of the Heimlich maneuver. Cost is $15 for the eight-hour class. A certificate will be presented upon completion.

For more information call the Red Cross at 624-6921.

Neighbors' protests stop plans for two-story home

By DAVID LELAND

THE OWNER of a vacant lot at Santa Lucia Avenue and Carmelo Street says he's unclear what he will do with his property. But one thing is certain, he won't be building the two-story house he proposed to the county.

Earlier this month, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors unanimously upheld an appeal by Carmel resident Tom May which said the plans approved by the county planning commission did not fit with the area land use plan.

"It was very clear that the proposed structure was not in keeping with the neighborhood," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman.

Owner Mauritis Lissaur had submitted plans for a two-story home, with a height of 23 feet 9 inches. The maximum height in that zoning district is 24 feet.

After visiting the property last March, the planning commission approved a building permit.

On April 16 an appeal was filed with the county by May in which he disputed the planning commission's findings.

His main contentions were that the proposed home would bring down the property value of the neighborhood and would not provide adequate parking, which could upset traffic patterns.

Completion of the project would cause, "Failure to provide see-through visibility at a busy intersection which is showing constantly increasing traffic density....," May said in his appeal.

May also pointed out the small size of the lot, the overall design, such as the squared-off style of the building as viewed from Carmelo Street and the incompatibility of the design with the style currently under construction on the adjacent lot.

Lissaur said he still is unclear what he will do with the property, which he bought last December.

"I don't know yet, I'm suprised," he said. "I thought (my plan) was a little better than the neighborhood. The planning commission thought so too."

Now, Lissaur must start from scratch if he desires to get a new permit.

The $215 non-refundable filing fee with the planning department is lost and he is not sure if he wants to spend any more money on architects.

"I might sell," he said.

Tree removal a necessary task

IF YOU hike through Mission Trail Park or live nearby you no doubt have recently heard the noise of chain saws. Unfortunately many pines have died and are being removed.

This process is necessary to ensure the safety of park users, reduce the fire hazard, and provide space for new replacement trees to grow, according to Gary Kelly, city forester.

Concurrent with the dead tree removal is another maintenance task taking place in the park. Over the years the willow grove in the lower section of the park has expanded engulfing the park's meadow area. The Forestry Commission authorized the removal of a portion of that grove to return the area to its original dimensions when the park was established in 1976.

Their intent is not to change the atmosphere of the park but to manage it wisely for its intended passive recreational uses.

"If you are looking for a place of beauty and wilderness why not take a walk through the 35 acres of unspoiled native vegetation," Kelly said. "We are fortunate that such an area exists within our lovely village."

I spend long evenings on the bay. But some days I relax cruising down the coast.

Faces behind the faces

DID YOU ever wonder what happen before the "On The Air" sign is switched to red and the familiar faces of Kimberly Hunt, Jim Wieder, and Stephanie Winn appear on your television screen with the latest news?

Do they just walk in all dressed up, sit down, and start talking? No. There are tips, interviews, phone calls, assignments, priorities to consider, research, changes, cancellations, late-breaking stories, cameras to focus, a control room of machinery to manipulate.

In the minds of the general public, television is a glamour industry. Perhaps it does have more than a mere sprinkling of showmanship. It certainly is a magnet for bright, attractive achievers who like what they are doing and are excited about their futures in the glitter segment of this communication medium.

On investigation at KMST-TV Channel 46 in Monterey, we learned this station has come a long way, baby, since it opened in a 7,000 square foot airplane hanger on Highway 68 in a year of record-breaking bad weather back in the late '60s. The staff (of 25) used a "company umbrella" as a shield against pelting rain as they went from the main building to the control studios.

Now, home for a staff of 90 is a striking tan/red structure with 18,000 square feet on Garden Road where the operations manager can reach the heart of the studio (the control room) in five seconds flat. The company umbrella is part of history.

What is not seen by television viewers is the newsroom — the nerve center of the orderly presentation of local happenings and national news that is given to you all free with the purchase of your television sets.

Here is a print-out picture of the scenario behind the camera lens. First for each face that floats on airwaves into your homes there are seven to eight people behind them. For hours and hours before a newscast the newsroom (filled with desks and youthful zest at typing machines and phones), is a beehive of activity. There are 25 in-the-field reporters, videographers, producers, editors, directors, assistants, an assignment planner, field producers and newscasters, all of whom work for News Director William "Bill" Piggott.

To "What is a news director?" Bill replied, "The television business isn't like Mark Twain with just a pen — we need 500 pounds of equipment for our work. Running a news department is like running a team of horses pulling a wagon — the show. You can get steady plough horses but they aren't very exciting, or, you can get thoroughbreds — race horses with a lot of spirit. It will be hard to point them in the right direction, but when you do it is spectacular! That's what I try to do.

"Anchor people are the most difficult to hire. They must have a lot on the beam because everything goes wrong all the time and they have to look like everything is going smoothly.

"I don't want someone who is interested only in news. That's one dimensional," he said regarding his hiring policies. "I like people with broad interests and hobbies. These people are curious, and curious people make the best news people.

"Our station is known for training. I hire people qualified to do more than one job, then train them. It's more work, but I prefer it. I tell people I want them for two years and hope they go on to something better. Then I hire other good people. Our biggest turnover is in assignment editors and producers. The burn-out rate is high."

Bill's gray eyes twinkle, "News work is fascinating. I like the confusion of never knowing what is going to happen. I can't imagine doing anything else."

Fundamental to news is the production department managed by Mark Walker who says, "My job is to make sure that all programming elements are made properly, on time, in budget, and see that everything gets on the air.

"The staff (of 27) in this area works for everyone," he states. "Camerapersons, directors, writers, editors, and production assistants. Directors spend half a day with news and the rest doing commercials, special coverage, promos, or public service messages with Community Relations Director David Gurien. (Kathy Nash heads up Public Affairs.) Writers put commercials together so the director has a script and editors help make them into finished products after the shootings.

"Our biggest job is producing 60 percent of local commercials for the sales department. We run into a problem when local advertisers want a spot for $200 that looks like a $5 million Pepsi commercial by Michael Jackson. However, using video instead of film controls cost. We see it the same day and if we are happy we can move on without waiting a day (as is required with film).

"We do a lot of work with Bob Stock promoting our programs and upcoming events. News would be next because we have news every day."

The interview was interrupted several times by staff members. "I sometimes feel like the busiest person at the station," said this young man on the go. "I do a bit of writing, editing and shooting when I can. It keeps me fresh and if my people have trouble I jump in and help. Every day there is a different client, or two or three. I like my work."

The "Ms. Monterey Television" title belongs to Barbara Waechter, who joined the station in the fall of 1968 before it was operational. Airtime began the following February and she remembers the company umbrella days well. (Relaw Enterprises Inc., the present owners, purchased the station in October 1979).

As director of Operation/Programming, Barbara must see that every hour of every day of airtime is filled. "I pencil in my prime time late night, and Sunday shows to see where the empty spaces are. Then, I check inventory to see what can be used. There are various ways to fill up time — network shows, for one, and KMST sticks closely with its home network Columbia Broadcasting System. She things of CBS as "a hotel with the affiliates renting the rooms."

Programs must be bought ahead of time — in some instances up to two or three years in advance. "I became interested in Oprah Winfrey early and started pitching for her show with King World (syndicators). It is a real catch. She has already been declared the "Donahue buster." I bought the Oprah show in September 1985. It is rare that you can buy a show and start it from the beginning.

"There are many programs available through syndicators. I must get 10 calls a day from Paramount, Blair, Lorimar, Martel and others. We are lucky to be headquartered in such a nice building in such a beautiful area. The reps are all eager to come to the Monterey Peninsula. They want to come on Thursday or Friday and stay for the weekend."

Monterey's KMST is 110th out of 200 television markets (rating is based on population) in the country and although San Francisco is number five, Barbara tries to get the jump on them and often is successful. With Retlaw's recent purchase of KIMA (Yakima, Wash.), with its two satellites KEPR (Pasco, Wash.) and KLEW (Lewiston, Idaho) bargaining power has been enhanced. "There is strength in numbers," she finds. (Retlaw owns KJEO in Fresno and is currently bidding for another station.)

"Since television is a kind of committee decision-making, we must consider not only will the public like the shows, but can the show be sold commercially?"

Barbara's question "Can you sell ads for this program?" is directed to Tom Tucker, general sales manager, who handles all national sales in New York, San Francisco, and Los Angeles with the major markets as well as overseeing the local sales staff.

The sales manager's job is to get as much money as possible for spots — to set rates high enough so that the station doesn't lose money but low enough so that 90 percent of the time is filled. They always need some space left to be sold at the last minute at a higher price.

Three types of ads are: network commercials sold by national CBS and run on every CBS station. In prime-time (like 60 Minutes) only five commercials are local and the rest are network. All commercials seen on KMST from 3 to 8 p.m. (with the exception of network news) are locally originated because the shows are syndicated or are local shows. For these, the sales crew goes out, knocks on doors, and talks to someone about an ad.

Again, it is repeated that all departments work together in this high energy business.

Last, but certainly not least, the boss — General Manager Ben Tucker, who says, "There is no magic in what makes a successful television station manager. You get the right combination of people, provide an environment for them to grow, challenge them on a regular basis, set goals that are meaningful and attainable, and talk about how to do those things as a unit. No one person totally drives the engine. It has to be a combination of all those coordinated energies.

"What do I do? That's a good question. As organized as anyone tries to be in this job, you find out that you must be more flexible with your daily schedule than you would like to be. That keeps this position fun and challenging. Flexibility is the key.

"Hopefully, people are not driven to have to watch television, but during their entertainment hours we want to be one of the choices for their enjoyment," Ben continues.

"Focusing on major community events, public affairs issues, and news gives us an identity with the community. Those who work here live in the community, use local services and surrounding pleasures, which makes KMST a community institution.

"Obviously, we have to do well for local advertisers by helping them move their products and services or we won't have the money for community services and still return a profit to our ownership. All this becomes a necessary part of the commercial broadcasting entity.

"There are some great careers in our business and being a television station general manager is one of them. It is both a challenge and an opportunity to do many things for the community. It is an exhilarating platform."

See you on the air!

IT'S TIME for the Third Annual Summer Lick-In. A lick-in, boys and girls, is a "Celebration of Summer" with an ice cream cone giveaway from noon to 2 p.m., Saturday, June 20 at Devendorf Park.

One of the founders of the event, Greg Cellitti, owner and operator of Friar Tuck's restaurant (corner Dolores and Fifth), is donating Dreyer's Best Ice Cream for public consumption and will be there to dish out the tasty delight. On hand to scoop will be other local personalities and hopefully ice cream lovers to scoop for. Come on by and get your licks in. No brass band, no balloons, no honky tonk. Just free ice cream and a rejoicing that Carmel is a small enough community that you can still give out freebies.

The event was started the summer of 1985 during the height of Carmel Great Ice Cream Controversy, and if you can't laugh about that hullabaloo, what can you laugh at?

READER'S DELIGHT

Anne Palk, owner of The Book Room in Su Vecino Court on Lincoln, is leaving the good and bad of retail behind. She has sold her shop.

Palk, who ran the book shop for 10 years, said she "is basically just tired" from running the operation single-handed and it's time to move on.

For those who dropped by The Book Room (across the courtyard from Bud's Pub) to replenish their flagging cultural and intellectual spirits, this might seem to be sad news. However, the store will carry on under the guiding hand of Judith Smith-Levin, who plans to continue its tradition of personal service and interesting over-the-counter chit chat.

Whodunnit buffs who appreciate the specialty of the shop, a mystery section that's reputed to be the largest on the peninsula, can relax and needn't worry that they will be solving the where'd-it-go puzzle. Smith-Levin said she intends to hold the lead in that area and will, in fact, expand on that theme. She hopes to conduct "mystery parties" and other events to pique the interest of mystery lovers.

That's not to say everything else will be ignored. The store will continue to carry fiction and non-fiction, fun and fine literature and everything else that marks an eclectic bookstore that caters to every reader's tastes.

Smith-Levin said the store will remain the same, except she will increase the number of bestsellers and may add magazines to the reading repertoire.

As a scriptwriter, author of novels, former reporter and book lover, Smith-Levin said owning a bookstore is a natural outcome of her own interests.

And what of Anne Palk, whose gracious presence and good taste has guided many a hungry reader through the shoals of good and bad literature. Palk will be in the store on Saturdays for a while, then off to enjoy herself in other pursuits.

Palk, who has made many good friends at the store over the years, said she will miss all her patrons — their conversation, their diverse personalities and their support.

COVER-UP

Got your attention? Think this about some incredible scandal, filled with backroom deals. No, it's about Josef Robes, a new store in The Crossroads.

Josef Robes, named for the Biblical figure Joseph and his coat of many colors, is the product of the Ferrall family — Michael, Marion and Gina Ferrall.

Michael and Marion Ferrall, utilizing his years in the theater, began designing robes and opened their own store in San Francisco. Their unusual original design of robes that open on the side has expanded into all kinds of sizes, styles and designs.

Gina Ferrall explained that everything is made with the best material and they can fit every shape and size body. The store will even do custom work.

Alice Russell, former owner of Le Bain at Ventana, will be managing the store for Ferralls.

CONGRATULATIONS, CLIVE RAYNE

This month marks Clive Rayne's 40th anniversary of working on Ocean Avenue in his and his brother's clothing store, Derek Rayne.

Rayne said the clothing store is the oldest retail store in Carmel, and certainly the most long-lived establishment on Ocean Avenue. Founded in 1944 by brother Derek Rayne, it has continued to offer what Clive Rayne describes as "very high-grade men's and ladies clothing" with "personalized service." The shop has repeat customers from all over the United States, Rayne said.

Rayne joined his brother and their father, Charles, in the business on June 9, 1947 and he's been there ever since.

Rayne still loves the town but has witnessed many changes in 40 years of Carmel-watching. The end of World War II marked the beginning of those changes. It was then it started to grow, Rayne said.

"It's gone from a nice, sort of quiet artist colony to a much busier place," he said.

Rayne said he doesn't want Carmel to become "isolationist" but he hopes "we can hold the line and preserve the values that make this a unique place." Those values include an interest in quality in the businesses.

One reason his shop has managed to stay on Ocean Avenue and stay the type of store it has, Rayne said, is because the family owns the building. Increasing rents would have forced it to change its operation to a more high-volume type of merchandise.

Over the years, Rayne said the store has brought him more than monetary rewards.

"I have made a number of good friends here and a lot of nice friendships have evolved over the years," he said.

CROSSING OVER

The Plantation Peddler shop from The Crossroads has moved its goodies from the shopping center to Carmel. It just opened May 5 across from Bud's Pub on Lincoln Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

Owner Helen Ratto said she actually closed her store in The Crossroads in January, but it's taken a while to get everything settled into the new spot.

The shop, she said, is an American country store with both new and antique handcrafted home furnishings. As well as the larger furniture items, she carries smaller items like toys, lamps, quilts and more. Most of the merchandise comes from "back East," she added.

"It's not 'cutsey' country," she said.

If you love the look, but have trouble putting it all together, Ratto said she can help. She also does interior design.

SIMPLY NUTS

Not me this time. I'm talking about a new store in Carmel Plaza.

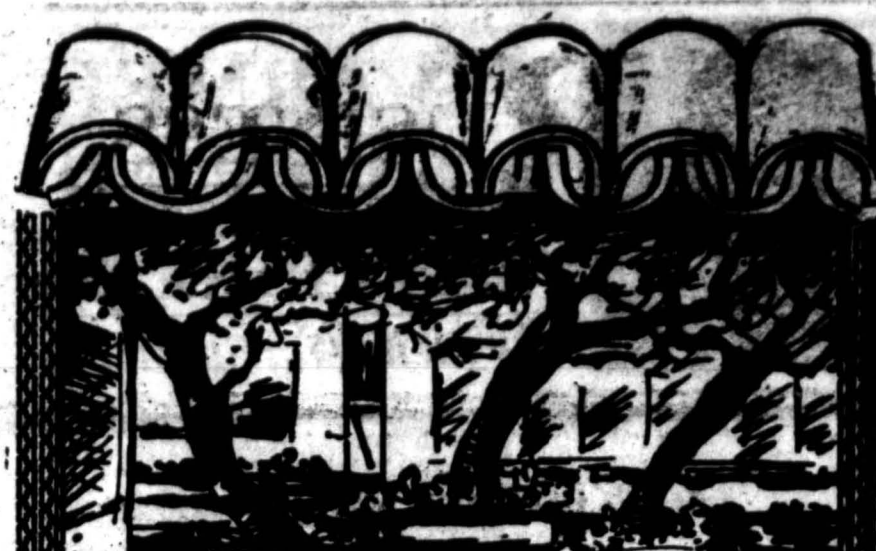

Herschel and Norma Kranitz's shop, Simply Nuts, is aptly named. There are all kinds, from fresh roasted to untoasted, salted and unsalted. You name it, they got it. Jalapeno-flavored pistachios, pralines from Florida, all types of brittle (peanut and otherwise) and just plain ol' nuts. By the pound or by the piece. No preservatives, no dyes — a least when they are finished with their red pistachios.

Norma Kranitz said they also do mini-catering, which entails putting together an assortment of goodies for parties, teas and gift boxes.

Got the craving. Go to the lower level of Carmel Plaza where the pipe & tobacco shop used to be.

THIS MONTH, Clive Rayne celebrates 40 years of working on Ocean Avenue at Derek Rayne clothing store, the oldest retail store in Carmel. Rayne said he has seen a lot of changes over the years and has made a lot of wonderful friends. (Holly McFarland photo.)

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

By Henrietta Stern

Don't be a water hog

"WATER SPIES dog water hogs!!" screamed a recent San Jose Mercury News headline. It described a squadron of "water spies" hired by a large Bay Area water district to sniff out water wasters. Their mission: patrol the streets in unmarked cars and catch the water wasters in the act. No, they don't drag the offending parties off to jail; they do ask them to conserve water and explain why it's important to do so.

Situations like this graphically demonstrate what you probably know already — we've had a dry year in California. State water agencies and many local districts consider 1987 a critically dry year, and have asked their customers to voluntarily cut back demand by 10 percent.

Monterey is in a similar situation. According to local weather hound Bob Renard, Monterey rainfall to date is nearly 13 inches compared to an average of almost 19 inches. Thus, we're at about 69 percent of normal. This is not a critical situation, but it's certainly not comfortable, especially since we cannot predict what will happen next year.

The onset, pattern and intensity of next year's rainfall will be the key factor determining our water status. If significant rains come in the fall, we can breathe easier. According to Cal-

Am, current water supplies can carry us through a dry summer, despite the low rainfall this year.

If next year's rains are not significant or do not begin until mid- to late winter, we could have some water supply problems. That means the potential of some sort of rationing. The level of rationing is impossible to predict, as it depends on next year's rainfall and water demand from now until then (that's where you come in). I think it's safe to say that we would not endure the restrictive rationing imposed in the 1976-77 drought. Even if 1988 is like 1977, Cal-Am has four more production wells than existed a decade ago, and greater capacity to produce water.

A GALLON SAVED IS A GALLON EARNED

Old Ben Franklin's axiom about money is relevant to water too! Because we don't know what tricks are up Mother Nature's sleeve, it behooves us to be conservation-minded now. The water we don't use over the summer remains in storage to be used later, when we really might need it. It's easy to save a little now, but very difficult (if not impossible) to get it back in the future.

What can you do to save water? You'd be surprised at the number of minor changes we can make in our daily habits that really make a difference when considered together. Suggestions include turning off the faucet while shampooing, brushing teeth or shaving; not letting the water run while washing dishes; using dishwashers or washing machines with full loads only; using a hose with a spray nozzle and a bucket to wash the car; and carefully monitoring garden irrigation. The district has pamphlets full of ideas if you need more.

It's an easy task to install water dams or water displacement bags in toilets, install faucets with aerators or replace showerheads with models that use less water. Our office has one that shuts off flow and restores the same hot/cold mixture at the touch of a button (no need to fumble for handles with shampoo in your eyes!). More substantial changes include planting colorful drought-tolerant plants that need less water, or installing ultra-low flow toilets.

WE'RE HERE TO HELP

Various agencies, including the district, are available to help you implement your own conservation plan. Free sample water-saver kits developed by the state are yours for the taking. The district is also working with the sewer agency on a more substantial conservation kit program; our goal is to distribute free kits with more effective toilet dams and new showerheads to all residents in the district. By the way, a new ordinance would require all businesses and hotels to install these kits in their commercial facilities.

District conservation coordinator Mike Ricker has information on drought-tolerant plants and landscaping ideas for all you gardeners. We also have several models of ultra-low flush toilets (1.5 gallons or less) in use for your inspection.

At its last meeting, the board passed the first reading of a districtwide conservation ordinance. It would require replacement of old water-wasting toilets with conserving models upon sale, installation of ultra-low flow toilets in all new construction, distribution of conservation kits for voluntary use, and mandatory kit installation by the commercial sector. If you live in Carmel or Monterey County, your jurisdiction already has its own conservation ordinance. Check with the planning department for information.

It should be emphasized that conservation is not a short-term action to get us through one dry year. It is an integral part of good water management. Recall that the New San Clemente Dam project assumes a 15 percent reduction in projected demand in the year 2020 due to conservation. Assuming the project is approved by the electorate, conservation will play an important role in the ensuing years before the dam comes on line. Best of all, conservation can save you money! Less water use means lower water bills and often lower power bills (less hot water).

For the good of the community, for the benefit of you and your family, don't be a water hog! And tell a friend!

CARMEL YOUTH BASEBALL

BY MARY PARSONS

Derek Rayne on top

FINAL BRONCO standings: Derek Rayne, 10-4; La Playa, 9-5; Pine Inn 7-7; Carmel Valley Disposal, 2-12.

As first and second-place division winners, Derek Rayne and La Playa will play Carmel Valley Little League's first and second-place teams on July 4 in Carmel Valley in the annual showdown between the two leagues.

Pine Inn defeated Carmel Valley Disposal 17-6 on June 6 in a game featuring the season's only Bronco grand slam home run, when Brian Sarkin (PI) came up with the bases loaded and blasted him way into the record books. Leading hitters for the winners were Billy Hall (2-for-3 with 2 doubles and 3 RBI), Mark Brophy (2-for-2 with 5 runs scored), and David Palshaw. Carl Dauphine (2-for-3 with 2 RBI and a double) led the hitting for CVD.

Also on June 6, Derek Rayne was the winner against La Playa by a score of 9-6. Leading hitters: LP's Adam Conway (2-for-3 with a double) and Sean O'Rourke (2-for-3); DR's Frank Melicia (2-for-4 with 2 doubles), Damian Griss, Steve Biliouris and Jon Tedrow. Matt Miller (DR) was sharp at second base for the victors.

On June 8, in an extra-inning game, Derek Rayne narrowly beat Carmel Valley Disposal, 2-1. Each team scored a run in the second inning, then good fielding by both sides kept the score tied until the bottom of the eighth. Derek Rayne's Alex Premier (2-for-3) took top hitting honors in the game.

On June 9, Pine Inn fell to La Playa, 12-11. LP's Matt Travaille was the star of the game, as he went 3-for-5 with a 3-run homer and a 2-run double and turned in a fine pitching performance in the final three innings. Teammates Willie Moore, Chris Watkins, and Sean O'Rourke also batted well. Providing clutch hits for Pine Inn were Mark Colliard, Brian Sarkin, David Palshaw and Mark Brophy; Ranon Masliyah (2-for-4) led the hitting. Chris Watkins was responsible for a double play which ended a Pine Inn rally in the fourth.

On June 13, La Playa took a 24-2 win over Carmel Valley Disposal. Home runs were hit by Tim Wiesner (LP) and Carl Dauphine (CVD). Leading hitters for the winners were Adam Conway (4-for-5 with 3 RBI), Willie Moore (3-for-3 with 3 RBI), Matt Travaille and Chris Morgan (both 4-for-5), Wiesner and Sean O'Rourke.

Derek Rayne clinched their division title in the final Bronco game June 13 as they beat Pine Inn 6-3. Steve Biliouris (3-for-4) was leading hitter for the winners; teammates Damian Griss, Alex Premier, Grayson Spier, Jon Tedrow and PI's Marc Colliard all had key hits. Griss was hot at shortstop, and PI's Quinton Hoover played a great centerfield, including a dramatic diving catch in the second inning.

Final Mustang standings: Dick Bruhn, 10-2; Yates, Downer, Dyer and Kirkpatrick, 9-3; County Mounties, 5-7; Carmel Realtors, 3-8-1; Books, Inc., 3-8-1.

Yates, Downer, Dyer and Kirkpatrick won a tough match against County Mounties on June 6, 18-17. Toby Lauterbach (3-for-4 with 6 RBI and 2 triples) led the hitting for the winners, while teammates Cooper Scollan (3-for-3) and Brian O'Rourke were also hot; Jeff Reeves hit a double. For the Mounties, Brandon McMahan (3-for-3), Paul Huntington (2-for-3 with 4 RBI) and Ben Thompson were leading hitters and Robbie Koontz and Josh Wilson hit doubles. Scollan was responsible for a great play at second base.

Dick Bruhn beat Carmel Realtors 11-4 on June 6. Leading hitters: DB's Tahl Raz (2-for-3) and CR's Chris Bleich.

Dick Bruhn won again on June 8, beating Yates, Downer, Dyer and Kirkpatrick 5-2. Casey Christensen and Chris Chatham were both 2-for-3 for the winners.

On June 13, Dick Bruhn clinched their division title by beating Books, Inc. 21-12. The game was close until the fifth inning, when Dick Bruhn scored eight runs. DB's Michael Palshaw (2-for-3) hit a grand slam home run, and did a great job on the mound. Teammates Brent Sullivan and Casey Christensen (with a triple) were also hot at bat. Steamer Pease (2-for-3), Channing Griggs and David Soskin were top hitters for Books.

County Mounties won their game against Carmel Realtors on June 13 in a game which saw yet another Mustang grand slam home run, this time by Paul Huntington (4-for-5). Top hitters for CR were John Wandke (2-for-3 with 2 doubles), Nick Vandervert (with a triple) and Matt Heinrich. Heinrich and Huntington each turned a double play during the game.

In Minor Softball, Em Le's beat the Emerald Ladies 10-9 on June 3, took a 12-4 win over Cypress Donuts on June 6, and capped off the season June 11 with a 16-5 win over Carmel Plaza, in which Samantha Hisey hit a home run and Andrea Greco hit a triple.

Disabled persons can get free telephone equipment

Under a statewide program, Pacific Bell and other local telephone companies will provide disabled persons with special telephone equipment free of charge.

This is in addition to an existing program, which provides Telecommunications Devices for the Deaf (TDDs) so that deaf and severely hearing impaired persons can communicate over the telephone network.

"This new program makes it possible for people with any disability to use the telephone," said Jerry Peterson, chairman of the Deaf Equipment Acquisition Fund (D.E.A.F.) trust administrative committee, which will oversee both programs.

"For example, people with disabilities such as quadriplegia or a laryngectomy, will be able to request equipment such as a hands-free speaker phone or an artificial larynx," said Peterson.

Other products will include sound amplifiers, automatic dialers, and TDDs. Besides equipment, free services will be offered, including Touch-Tone and speed calling. Basic monthly service charges will still apply. Additional equipment will be available as the telephone companies study the needs of the disabled people participating in the program.

Established by the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) in accordance with state law, the program is paid for by California telephone customers through a monthly surcharge on their telephone bills. The surcharge is currently 3 cents a month.

To qualify for the program, a person must reside in California in a household with telephone service and must give the local telephone company a medical certificate signed by a licensed physician or qualified state agency.

Eligible small businesses, i.e., those with single-line telephone service, may also request the special equipment if a medical certificate is provided for the owner, one of the partners or disabled employees of the business.

According to Peterson, the state telephone companies will not make a profit from the program. They will only be reimbursed for expenses.

More information may be obtained by calling Pacific Bell's toll-free number, 1-800-772-3140.

FIRE LINES

By Mitch Kastros

Get the facts first

I'VE NEVER written a column in the first person before because I haven't wanted to come across as a know-it-all in my attempts to help educate the public on fire safety and awareness.

What I've tried to do is pass on what I've learned from some very competent individuals, along with 13 years of experience as a firefighter. My only hope is that you might have taken the time to read my columns and learn for yourselves about a subject that most people treat with a great deal of apathy, until after it affects them.

Though this article is written by me, I am speaking on behalf of the hundreds of firefighters who battled the Pebble Beach fire on May 31st. We took a beating at that fire, and have been taking a beating from the public and the news media ever since.

Sure, criticism is a part of the job, and we and all the departments involved have been critiquing our own performance and trying to learn by this experience to be better prepared for the next time we are faced with this situation. We know the overall operation was a success, because if it wasn't, the fire would still be burning and the same devastation that occurred in Pebble Beach would have been experienced in areas such as Skyline Forest, Community Hospital, the Presidio, New Monterey and Carmel, just to name a few. There would also have been a lot more injuries along with some fatalities.

It seems that a lot of people who know considerably less about this situation than we do feel that we failed. To avoid making assumptions, I'll just say that these people are most likely being misinformed.

I suggest to those people that they get the facts before throwing blame in a situation where no one is to blame except the person or persons who started the fire. I'm certainly interested in hearing what they have to say, aren't you?

A good start in obtaining the facts would be for the news media to give an accurate report on what really happened during the initial response. If the facts aren't immediately available to the news media, then it shouldn't make assumptions that sound as if the responding units stopped for burgers and fries on the way to the fire. No one will know exactly what happened until the investigation is completed and made public.

In the meantime, the news media can learn about things like the Incident Command System and report on that. Then the public would know that fire trucks were driving past burning houses for a legitimate reason (to an assigned position), and not because we were "scared" or didn't care. Sure we were scared. Anyone who wasn't scared didn't belong there, and I've never met a firefighter who didn't care enough to give his or her best effort to try and minimize damage to life and property at a fire.

However, none of this is ever reported because it's not a screw-up, and it doesn't cause controversy, and it doesn't sell newspapers or air time. Too much is reported based on hearsay but presented as fact, and that helps the public assume the worst, though some people don't need any help from the media.

Was any criticism thrown at the public for its interfering with the fire engines that were responding to the fire, or for the amount of non-emergency calls that were made to the 911 Center? Not by the people who were mad at us.

There won't be any reporting about how many firefighters were treated for smoke inhalation days or weeks after the fire, or how many heaved their guts out when they got home because they were so worked up, or how many will need therapy to help deal with the scars left from knowing more than 30 houses burned down.

As I said before, all of this is part of the job, but if people are going to comment on the story, they might as well know the whole story.

The Pebble Beach fire is still on everyone's mind and people are all of a sudden concerned about fire safety and beefed-up protection. However, we can't upgrade our equipment and department without your support at the city council meetings.

For those of you who are sincerely interested in gaining a better understanding of how a forest fire of this magnitude is fought and why certain tactics are used, we are here to answer your questions. We would be happy to explain the Incident Command System so you can understand the team approach to fighting this type of fire. We can tell you how to get information about the situation without tying up the phones. We can inspect your own home and property and point out any hazards that may exist. Call the fire department in your jurisdiction for any questions or constructive criticism you may have.

Unfortunately, all of this attention and interest in fire protection and safety will soon dissipate, with the exception of those who were directly involved in this tragedy. Again firefighters will be looked upon not as teachers and helpers, but as people to be laughed at for having boring jobs, being nitpickers for safety regulations and for making a big deal about sending a big fire engine to put out a small trash can fire; the same kind of trash can fire that occurred on May 31st.

TWO CARMEL HIGH STUDENTS AWARDED PRIZES

Two Carmel High School graduating seniors were awarded cash prizes for successfully predicting which stocks on the Exchange were likely to gain the greatest value during a six-month period.

During the fall semester at the high school, Ronald Foster, the vice-president and resident manager of Prudential-Bache Securities in Carmel was a guest speaker in the economics class of Dr. Kenneth Bullock. Foster's daughter, Ashley, was a member of the class and arranged for her father to speak on the subject of the investment business as a profession and as a place to invest money for profit.

At the conclusion of his presentation, Foster invited each student to pick a stock on the Big Board and present the choice to Bullock who would compile a class list for his usage. The end of May was chosen as the end of the investment period and the stocks that made the greatest gain would bring their "owners" a monetary reward from Foster.

Dawn Oller, a senior recognized as an outstanding social science student by the department teachers, was the winner of $100 for selecting Reading and Bates as her stock. Matthew Gonzales, National Merit Scholar senior, correctly picked Puerto Rican Cement as likely to succeed and thereby won a second award of $50. The educational quality of the two winners must prove, according to their instructor, Dr. Bullock, that picking the correct stocks most likely to succeed takes a good deal of brain power indeed.

OBITUARIES

HARVEY HILBUN

Harvey J. Hillbun

Funeral services took place June 8 at El Estero Chapel of Mission Mortuary for Harvey J. Hillbun, former coroner of Monterey County and a lifelong resident, who died June 4 at his Carmel home after an apparent heart attack. He was 59.

Born Oct. 4, 1927 in Monterey, he attended local public schools. He was a Monterey fireman for five years and a Monterey police officer for a year before joining the county coroner's office in 1963 as a deputy coroner.

He was county coroner for five years, appointed in 1976 after the resignation of then-coroner Christopher Hill and elected in 1978 when he ran unopposed for the seat. He retired in December 1981 for medical reasons.

After his retirement from public office, county supervisors combined the sheriff's and coroner's positions. Hillbun spent most of his latter years in downtown Carmel, operating with his wife, Aleen, the Tuck Box restaurant on Dolores Street near Seventh Avenue.

He was a member of the F&AM Monterey Lodge No. 217, the Peace Officers Association of the Monterey Peninsula, the Diogenes Lodge of the Monterey Peninsula and the Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Gail Hillbun of Carmel; a son, Richard Hillbun III of Monterey; and a sister, Elizabeth Mehringer of Monterey.

Private burial took place at Monterey City Cemetery. The Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, P.O. Box 223339, Carmel 93922, or to the American Heart Association's Central Mission Trails Chapter, 10 San Miguel Ave., Salinas 93901.

Morris F. Sheldon

A memorial service took place May 27 at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley, for Morris F. Sheldon, a former officer of the Security Pacific Bank in Los Angeles, who died May 21 on his 88th birthday at the Community Hospital.

Born May 21, 1899 in Watertown, S.D., he was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, class of 1921. He retired to Carmel in 1964.

Survivors include his wife of 60 years, Margaret; two daughters, Sara S. Hartwell of Danville and Susan S. Fraser of Tiburon, and two grandchildren.

Following cremation, the ashes will be interred in Pasadena, where Mr. Sheldon lived for many years.

Lilly A. Edel

Private cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove for Lilly A. Edel of Carmel, who died May 29 at the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula. She was 74.

Born Nov. 13, 1912 in Minneapolis, she attended the University of Minnesota and moved to the peninsula 47 years ago.

Mrs. Edel, known as Bing, was a member of the Carmel Valley Country Club.

Survivors include her husband, Adolph; a son, Frank of Reedsport, Ore.; a sister, Gunhild Eklund of Chula Vista; and two grandsons.

Following cremation, ashes were scattered at sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family prefers memorial contributions to the Monterey County SPCA or the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

Willard L. Henry

A memorial Mass took place June 5 at St. Angela's Catholic Church, Pacific Grove, for Willard Lynn Henry, a former golf pro at the Del Monte Golf Course, who died June 1 at his Pebble Beach home of an apparent heart attack. He was 58.

Henry, who was known as Bill, was born June 24, 1928 in Cleveland. He had lived on the Monterey Peninsula for the past 20 years, coming here from Saratoga. He was a golf professional at Del Monte between 1970 and 1975, and owner of the Pebble Beach Golf Club Co., a golf equipment manufacturer.

Before moving to this area, he operated indoor driving ranges, specializing in lessons and custom club work in Whittier and San Jose. Out of high school, he was a minor-league baseball player who played for the Chicago Cubs and Brooklyn Dodgers organizations for five years. He then graduated from Michigan State University and served with the Army for two years.

He was a Class A professional in the Professional Golfers Association and served on the PGA Northern California Division board of directors in 1978. He drove sprint and midjet race cars and was a member of the Beach and Tennis Club at Pebble Beach. An avid jazz musician, he played the drums.

Survivors include his wife, Claire; and three sons, Marc of San Francisco, Steven of San Jose and W. Scott of Beverly Hills.

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

"Not life, but a good life, is to be chiefly valued." — Socrates

 So little is known about Alzheimer's disease that physicians rely principally on psychological testing to diagnose it in patients. However, scientists at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine recently discovered a protein which seems to be unique to the brains of people afflicted with Alzheimer's. This has raised the hope that a chemical test for the disease may be available in the near future. Researchers don't know yet whether the protein is a result or cause of the disease or only a coincidence, but further testing should give a clue. That's hopeful news for the more than 2 million Americans suffering from Alzheimer's, an incurable condition which causes victims to lose their memories and other mental functions.

DLI offering $300 scholarship

The Hispanic Employment Program committee at the Defense Language Institute, Presidio of Monterey, is offering a $300 scholarship to graduating seniors in the Monterey Bay and Salinas areas.

Applicants must have a "B" average, and demonstrate financial need. Those applying for the scholarship, according to committee member Dr. Guido de la Vega Montalvo, should also have been involved in "school or civic activities such as Red Cross, church or hospital volunteer work."

Applications must be received, said de la Vega, no later than July 17 and must be accompanied by a written essay. The essay can be on one of four topics: "Why I Am Proud of My Cultural Heritage;" "The Importance of Being Aware of Other Cultures in the U.S.A.;" "The Influence of Present-day Social Values on One's Culture;" and "What A College Education Means to Me." Essays should be two pages in length and may be written in English or Spanish.

Application forms and questions on the scholarship should be directed to a member of the program committee through the DLI Equal Employment Opportunity Office, at 647-5105.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Solving a problem

From June 17, 1982 Pine Cone

On Sunday at the unseasonable hour of 6:30 a.m., I listened to the well-trained Mormon Tabernacle Choir from Salt Lake City, Utah. The melodious-voiced announcer Spence Kincaid "in the spoken word" stated that legal marriages before the altar were once again becoming more popular. He then went on to say that marriage is the most vital decision that a couple will make and how it deeply influences them and all society.

He observed that happiness in marriage is not a matter of blind luck but that it had to be created and nurtured. The couple had to give and forgive, to be considerate of their partner in every action, search out what is right in their interrelationship. That there is no place in a marriage for fault finding, nagging and sarcasm.

This seemed like admirable advice and I was wondering if my friends Joe and Maria were listening. I met them at the airport in Christchurch, New Zealand and they invited me to see their "slides" when we returned.

"We were in Christchurch on a Monday and here is a slide of the harbor," Joe says. "We were there on a Tuesday and it's a picture of Auckland." Maria says, "Joe, what difference does it make if it was Monday or Tuesday?" It means a lot to Joe because he is engaged in a never-ending struggle for control. He cannot let Maria tell a story without interruption because that would give her the center stage. He is saying "Never listen to Maria; listen to me."

You secretly resolve that if possible, you will never be caught in this embarrassing bickering. However, let both of us resolve to be tolerant of others even when they are wrong. We all need to be listened to with respect and interest. Being a good listener is one of the most beautiful gifts that one can bestow on a spouse.

I can never figure out why Maria didn't solve Joe's Monday-Tuesday problem with a baseball bat.

CARMEL VOICE

By Sam Salerno

Nice to be back

AS FRANK Sinatra put it in one of his songs, "It's Nice to Go Traveling, But Oh So Nice to Come Home!" That's exactly how I feel after being away for a few weeks. Took my son, Sam on a trip to see how the other half of the world lives in Europe. As an English major, he particularly loved London and the sights there. More about the trip later.

NEW FACE IN TOWN

Commercial Press in Sand City has a new addition to its staff...his name is Dominic Taddeucci, formerly of the Bay Area and a Santa Clara graduate who sells printing. Dom is now happily ensconced in this area and loves it. Nice guy, and can sell me printing any time. He should go a long way.

CITIZEN KANE

Local radio personality, Steve "Citizen" Kane handling the MC chores at the Paul Masson Mountain Winery in Saratoga this past weekend for the concert of Bonnie Raitt and David Bromberg. Kane does double duty by splitting his DJ work between KRML-AM (noon 'til 4 p.m.), and on KAZU-FM on Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. So if your ears need some soothing, take the "K" train with Steve Kane...you'll like the musical trip and the "sounds" aplenty.

FROM NORTH CAROLINA TO MONTEREY

Nick Nickell, president of Air Conditioning Corp., getting out of the heat of North Carolina and making it a "cool" golfing vacation with his friend, Dick Buxton of Private Capital Corp. The boys (and their wives) played all the top courses; Poppy Hills, Pebble Beach, Spyglass Hill, and Carmel Valley Country Club. Nickell has all the charm of a true Southern gentlemen.

CONDOLENCES ARE IN ORDER

My condolences to the Henry family and the Hilbun family on the loss of Bill Henry and Harvey Hilbun both of whom passed away during my absence. Bill Henry was the former golf pro at Del Monte Golf Course and most recently the originator and owner of the Pebble Beach line of golf clubs. Bill and I go back to the KRML days and the likes of Paul Lippman, Clint Eastwood, Ray Ramsey, etc. Harvey Hilbun, a familiar face about town, was the owner of the Tuck Box in Carmel and the former county coroner. Both were too young to leave us so soon. My best to their families.

JAZZ IN SAN LUIS

The Slo-Jazz Series for the American Lung Association will take place July 4th weekend in San Luis Obispo and will feature Joe Williams, Pancho Sanchez, Calvin Keys Quintet and many more jazz greats. Might be a nice way to spend July 4th weekend by heading south along 101.

FIRE FIRE, FIRE EVERYWHERE

Since my return from a European vacation, I've heard (and read about it while abroad) about the fire at Pebble Beach, but the classic line (and it's been repeated by more than three people), was that "no one could get through the Hill gate except a Domino's Pizza truck." I guess there must have been quite a bit of confusion when the fire got out of control and it's been reported to me that Highway 68 saved the day because the fire didn't cross over the road. The firefighters deserve a pat on their back for their efforts. Trust the families who lost their homes can put their lives back together soon.

THE SWING IS THE THING

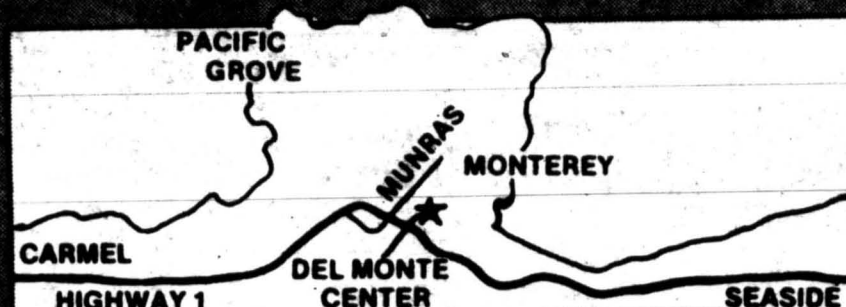

According to Howard Lazzarini, international marketing manager, Optimum Human Performance Center Golf Technology Institute will be giving a world premiere of Bio Vision, the newest most scientific way to improve the golf swing. Bio Vision is a revolutionary teaching tool that allows a golfer to view his body from any angle at any point in the swing. The premiere will take place June 12 through 21 at the San Francisco Airport Marriot Hotel. Might be a nice way to straighten out your golf swing. I think playing with low handicap players is another way to improve your game and to have a little riding on the match...makes you concentrate better.

MORE GOLF

Today's the start of the U.S. Open at the Olympic Club in San Francisco and rest assured we shall experience the influx of golfers and their wives as far south as the Monterey Peninsula, many whom came in a week earlier to play golf, shop, and eat in our area. Bob Murphy, Stanford alumni, is handling the whole affair at the Olympic under the auspices of the USGA. Bob had worked the Crosby announcing duties with Johnny Lamb, Earl Russell and this reporter a few seasons back. He's articulate and a wit. Incidentally, tickets for the Open have been sold out for more than six months. I'm picking Seve Ballesteros and Johnny Miller to finish one, two. But who am I to make a prediction...I thought the Titanic would make it.

See you next week.

Surfers converge on Carmel Beach

SLATHER ON the sunscreen and polish the dark glasses. It's time for the eighth annual Surfabout on Carmel Beach.

Competition will begin 6:30 a.m. both Saturday and Sunday, June 20-21. The surfing events for all age groups are high energy, free-form events. Surfers are judged on style, maneuvers, wave selection and the overall ride. No longboards (those over 7 feet 6 inches) are allowed in any shortboard events.

ARTS & LEISURE

Each wave a surfer rides will be scored by each judge on a scale of 1 to 10, half-points included. At the end of the 15-minute heat, each surfer's five best rides will be totaled for each judge. These totals are then added to give the surfer's score.

Surfabout observers are requested to park off of Scenic Road in Carmel, to keep traffic running smoothly, and to use the beach stairways and stay off the banks.

Among the special competitions returning this year are the Lew Boren Memorial, which is open to all ages. This event is dedicated to Boren, who died as a result of shark attack while kneeboarding at Spanish Bay in December 1981.

The distance paddle is open to all and any surfboard may be used. Paddleboards, considered any board over 10 feet 6 inches, will be included. The race starts against the cliffs at the south end of Carmel Beach. The paddlers paddle out and around the first buoy and then continue on a marked course. The race is named for Dickie Cross, a waterman who was lost at sea while surfing in Hawaii.

Some enter the race to win; others enter the race just to finish. Dick Cross' nephew, Marc Cross, won the race three years in a row, finally to be beaten in 1983 by Carmel's Robin Jeffers. Mike Bauer of Pacific Grove won the race in 1984, and Marc Cross paddled to reclaim the title in 1985. Last year's race was won by Pat Ashbrook of Carmel, followed by Ed Gazman in second place.

Other competitions are the junior and senior boogieboard, longboard, team paddling and best all 'round waterman.

Complete entry information is available through the surfabout sponsor, Sunshine Freestyle in Monterey. For registration details, call 375-5015.

SOUTH AFRICAN exhibition surfer Martin Potter makes the most of a small Carmel Beach break wave during a previous Surfabout. The eighth annual installment of the Surfabout arrives Saturday and Sunday, June 20-21, on Carmel Beach. Competition begins at 6:30 a.m. daily and includes events for various ages and skill levels. Sunshine Freestyle Sports in Monterey is a Surfabout co-sponsor.

Up With People schedules two Monterey concert stops

LOCAL PERFORMERS are included in the international cast of Up With People, which will perform Friday and Saturday, June 19-20 at King Hall of the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey. "Time for the Music" is the theme of the concerts, which are sponsored by the American Field Service (AFS) international student exchange. More than 100 performers from around the world are featured in the two-hour show. The first half of the program takes the audience on a world tour, and features popular and traditional songs, dances and costumes from nearly a dozen countries including Africa, China and the Soviet Union.

A highlight is the recreation of a turn-of-the-century, Deep South revival featuring gospel music from the film, The Color Purple. Children celebrating birthdays are in for a special surprise as the cast invites them on stage which has been transformed into a circus big top complete with international clowns and magic tricks.

The second half of the show begins with a trip back in time to a 1950s street corner. "Back to Basics" is a hoppin', rockin' look at the styles, steps and hit songs of the "do-wah" era. It includes such favorites as Little Richard's "Tutti Frutti," Elvis Presley's "Jailhouse Rock" and "Shout" by the Isley Brothers.

Each year more than 600 young adults comprising five international casts spend 11 months travelling to many lands. There are four local students presently performing with the 600 Up With People performers and one of them, Ben Beesley, will be with the cast performing in Monterey.

At the same time, Kym Wright, daughter of Carmel City Councilman James Wright, is travelling with Cast C in Belgium. Eddie Pittman, son of Barbara Pittman of Monterey, is travelling in Cast D in South Carolina.

Two students from this area, John Flores of Monterey and Brenda La Mica of Carmel, will both join Up With People casts in July and tour for one year.

The Monterey Peninsula area has 12 alumni that have travelled from 1968 to 1986.

Tickets are $9 and $7, with $1 off advance purchase. Tickets can be purchased in advance at Do Re Mi Music, Carmel, and Center Stage Ticketing, Monterey.

For additional information about the two concerts, call 624-4922.

UP WITH PEOPLE'S international cast of 100 generates a contagious energy that makes their audience a part of the show. The ensemble will return to the peninsula for concerts scheduled Friday and Saturday, June 19-20, at King Hall in the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey. Admission is $9 and $7, or $1 less per ticket if seats are reserved in advance. For information, call 624-4922.

Free forum addresses women's health issues

THEATER REVIEW

By Joe Guzaitis

Forest Theater summons up 'Brigadoon'

IF THERE is a more suitable theater for this evanescent event, I don't know it. The Forest Theater seems to have been designed for Brigadoon. The stately pines in the background frame the smaller ones on the set. The slope at stage left becomes a field in which the action progresses. The mist in the treetops crowns the effect. I could go on but suffice it to say that match of work and setting is a spectacular one.

The production on opening night got off a little stiffly but mellowed nicely a few numbers into the first act. The orchestra, directed by Kerry Thompson (in full kilt and tartan) was very good overall and contained many strong players such as Leah and Jack Bayes. Opening night did have us hear a few missed beats but the players showed that they were in control at all times by recovering nicely. A trio of bagpipers including Paul Hodgins, Michael Grillen and that rarity of rarities, a woman piper — Missy Jenkins, was an elegant accent.

The tale of Brigadoon is a sentimental one that tells of a village in the Scottish Highlands that achieves a miracle — that of being frozen in time (almost) — and being able to appear only one day in each century. This will preserve the blessed state that many (but not all) residents feel that Brigadoon possesses.

On that magic day in 1979, 200 years (or the second magic day) after the spell was cast, two American hunters got lost in the Scottish Highlands near the site of this mystical village of Brigadoon. Suddenly, they spy a village where none should be on the map. They approach it to find a fair in progress in the square. They are immediately recognized as outsiders and they in turn are immediately suspicious of this village that is just a wee bit too "authentic."

Before long our stalwart heroes have paired off with local girls. Tommy, played ably by Todd Lueders, who is about to enter into an unfeeling marriage back home, is smitten with Fiona, fetchingly played by Linda Purdy. (The role of Fiona is played by Holly Hofer on Sundays.) Jeff, played sardonically by Keith Decker, is fending off Meg. Meg is half Scot — half Gypsy and well endowed as well as persistent. Tommy knows love for the first time, dropping his urbane veneer to let his feelings show. Jeff thinks it's all a crock and wants to go home for happy hour.

The catch is that if Tommy stays with Fiona, the next time he wakes up it will be 2079 and he will really have made a commitment! He chickens out after Jeff preaches cynical bombast at him. They both go home and are seen in a bar in Manhattan a few months later. Tommy's fiancée has been house hunting and planning the wedding and shows us that there is little more to her than can be found in the Tiffany catalog. Tommy is morose; Jeff is drunk and suddenly the spirit of Fiona appears to him and off they go to Brigadoon.

again. By special dispensation, Tommy is allowed to enter the enchantment and say goodbye to Jeff's cynicism and an empty relationship.

The final scene in the bar is curious. Through prop magic, a large painting on the back wall becomes transparent and we see and hear Fiona and others singing in reprise to Tommy as he broods on his bad decision to leave Fiona. The effect is so startling that it takes our attention away from the action. Perhaps just voices offstage would have been enough. It's obvious much work and effort went into this effect but it may be that the outdoor surroundings work against it.

THERE IS A pleasant subplot that deals with the marriage of Fiona's sister Jean MacLaren (Laurel Harris) to one Charles Dalrymple (Ian Newmann). She's a winsome lass and he an excellent vocalist and there are many fine touches in the prenuptials. The key song in this sequence is "Come to Me, Bend to Me" sung by Charles that is guaranteed to make romantics swoon and present-day women groan.

Other songs that stand out are "Almost Like Being in Love," "There But for You Go I," and "From This Day On." My reaction to several of these songs was "So that's where that's from!" Ensemble works were well carried out especially "My Mother's Wedding Day" where LaVonne Rae Andrews outdoes herself again in sheer exuberance. Her solo number "The Love of My Life" was also done with great feeling.

There are too many cast members to acknowledge but several bear mention. Mr. Lundie (James P. Kinney) nicely plays the "keeper of the secret" who reveals the destiny of Brigadoon to Tommy. Harry Beaton (Vincente J. Salazar) plays a rejected suitor of Fiona's sister who threatens to leave Brigadoon and break the spell.

The dances were excellent. The company exhibited a pleasant verve as they went through the spirited jigs. There was

Summer camp registration taken

Camping activities, special trips, and arts and crafts begin June 22 at the City of Monterey's Whispering Pines Day Camp for children 5 to 9 years old. Nine consecutive one-week sessions open up a summer of fun!

Registration is underway on a first-come basis and enrollment is limited. Fees for City of Monterey residents are $45 per week; fees for non-residents are $50 per week.

Campers will travel to Santa Cruz Boardwalk during "Down by the Sea Week," July 13-17, and to Roaring Camp in Felton during "Frontier Week," Aug. 3-7.

Camp runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Wednesday at Whispering Pines Park on Pacific Street. On Thursday the children camp out overnight and camp ends Friday at noon.

For more details concerning Whispering Pines Day Camp, call the City of Monterey Park and Recreation Department at 646-3866.

also a Sword Dance by the men in tartans; all of which kept the show lively. The Dance Captain was Jane Delay and she deserves much credit. Costumes were by Sonya Tomlinson who got assistance from the San Jose Civic Light Opera. They were convincing overall and particularly good for the formal kilt and tartan scenes.

I didn't see a Wrangler listed in the credits but they sure could have used one. Several lambs were used as props in the village scenes and apparently did not come from theatrical families. They squirmed and bleated and generally looked like they'd rather be somewhere else.

The props were effective with a few exceptions, but the exceptions were funny. The modular trees and stone arches were used to great effect and the village itself was believable enough. However, in the beginning, when the hunters first spy Brigadoon, a small model village is hoisted into place at the back of the stage through wisps of smoke and glow of embers but alas, the gears needed greasing so the village, sort of an "urbs ex machina," lurches unsteadily into place. The audience was amused. Later, in Act Two, when our two stalwarts are seen in a Manhattan bar, the city skyline is hoisted above the bar (to be sure we know where we are). It lurches also and is off cue. These are things that will be remedied I'm sure by the time you read this but serve to point out how intricate the effort is in building complex sets and having them perform to specification. Carey Crockett is the set designer and Nancy Oppenhuizen is the property designer and each has done a creditable job in making this piece come alive.

Director Hamish Tyler brings off this ambitious work because of the strength of his company and his own good instincts. It has a few hitches as I mentioned but the show catches you up as it was meant to do. This may mean suspending your disbelief in some of its moods or attitudes. If it sweeps you up in spite of your reservations, then it indeed can be considered even more successful. I must confess that I arrived skeptical but I went away humming a tune whose origins I had forgotten.

For newcomers to our area, a bit of advice. It is always colder than you think at the Forest Theater at night. So dress one more layer warmer than you might be inclined to at first. Wear a cap and bring a scarf. Sitting on a cushion, or even a newspaper, makes a big difference. Wool socks for those with poor circulation. The wood fires are picturesque but their warmth does not reach the back row. Don't let this deter you from seeing a production here — it is truly a special place. This setting is rivalled by few in the world.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joanne Tenenbaum

'Judevine' opens at Western Stage

NEW ENGLANDERS like to ease into things without drawing attention to themselves, and David Buddbill's Judevine, a Vermont Anthology opened last Thursday at the Western Stage in much the same way.

When Judevine's audience enters, The play's modest, screened set is plainly visible, proclaiming itself a local bar by virtue of a homemade, lit up sign ("BEER"). With the house lights still up, the cast begins to enter one by one, so casually it is difficult to tell whether the performance has begun. We hear snatches of their talk that do not seem to fit together.

After awhile, the house lights go down, and David (Kenneth Wagner), a fledgling writer who is obviously not a native, assumes the dual role of narrator and character, telling us the townspeople's stories, often while the characters act them out.

Directed by Tom Humphrey and Taft Miller with a solid respect for the material, Judevine is a showcase for the character acting skills of a talented cast of seven, who assume 21 roles, one often following the last in a space of an eyeblink, maintaining credible accents throughout.

The New England temperament appears, to the rest of us, deliberate, overpractical, and devoid of emotion. Buddbill sees through the veneer to an appealing collection of small-town types. Their issues are the issues of people everywhere, intensified in the crucible of the small town setting and striking in the context of the taciturn New England temperament.

Grace (Cynthia Peters) is a case in point. An abandoned mother of three children, Grace reluctantly explains the emotions that drove her to strike her infant in a monologue that comprehends the emotional tangle of child abuse with a clarity often lacking in the verbose.

Tommy's (Ken Hicks) edgy, haunted Vietnam veteran wordlessly conveys the hopeless misery of his attempt to return to Judevine life following his hair-raising war experience. The townspeople's uneasy reaction to him clarifies his plight still further.

Joy Ann Camp's old Lucy has permanently left her own weak reality, the loss of both son and husband 40 years before. Camp's quirky accent and delivery perfectly create the old woman who talks only to strangers, telling them always the same story — they'll be home soon; probably tomorrow.

Especially appealing is the story of a gently 70ish couple, Anne (Joy Ann Camp) and Raymond (Ken Hicks), whose life together is enlivened briefly by the influx of hippies in the '60s, then disrupted by marauding bikers, and whose final moments are as beautiful in their determination as their lives have been.

Another elderly couple (Joyce Lower and Henry John Guevara) act out the daily ritual of their prim, 50-year-long courtship, adding another dimension to the New England temperament. A single flash of insight from Arnie (Ken Hicks), a dotty, impoverished old man who wipes his nose on his sleeve (exactly twice a day) and who shambles through the town aimlessly, adds another.

Arnie is hauled out by David as an example of the New Englander's determination to survive, however wretched his existence. But one day Arnie looks up at the sun setting magnificently over the Vermont hills, and comments, with conviction, "That's why I live here," and it emerges that Arnie's sensitivity to beauty is simply too subtle for David's perception.

Little by little, we begin to perceive that the characters' lives dance to the rhythm of the Vermont seasons. For example, Antoine (delightfully portrayed by James Floss), is a foulmouthed French Canadian who finds winter much more endurable once he has a woman to warm his long winter nights.

The playwright is also a poet, and Judevine's lyrical language and story-telling structure are also distinctively New Englander. In fact, everything about this show reinforces its subject matter. Like people everywhere, the townspeople of Judevine have their triumphs, tragedies and lost dreams. But unlike most of ours, their lives take place in the context of a natural world that shapes them, and, not yet displaced by urban society, they see themselves as part of it.

Judevine is a rich, leisurely play. Solid ensemble performance, careful pacing in the direction, and the Western Stage's usual close attention to technical detail add up to a polished production well worth your seeing.

LISTENING to every scrap of gossip circulating through Judevine, Vermont, are a collection of its residents, portrayed by, James Floss and Ken Wagner (foreground), Joy Camp and Joyce Lower (in hat).

38 The Carmel Pine Cone / CV Outlook June 18, 1987

EMMET GOWIN'S Barry, Dwayne, and turkeys, a 1970 work, is included in the Friends of Photography 20th Anniversary Exhibition. The show, which opens Friday, June 19, will be followed in August by a second installment retrospective. For exhibition details, contact the Friends at 624-6330.

WYNN BULLOCK made this silver print in 1968, titled Sea Palms. He is among the many artists whose work will be represented in a retrospective honoring the 20th anniversary of the Friends of Photography. The exhibit can be viewed in the Friends gallery in Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

Friends of Photography opens anniversary retrospective

THE FRIENDS of Photography's Twentieth Anniversary Exhibition, Part One will open on Friday, June 19 and continue through Aug. 9. David Featherstone, associate director, and Sylvia Wolf, curatorial/editorial intern, served as co-curators for the exhibition. A reception will be held Friday from 8 to 10 p.m. The public is invited to attend free of charge.

On June 15, 1967, a news release formally announced the founding of The Friends of Photography and invited the public to the organization's first exhibition which was to open on June 23. Since that time, more than 200 exhibitions, including the work of some 1,000 photographers, have been mounted in The Friends Gallery, and several shows coordinated by The Friends' staff have been viewed throughout the United States as well as in Europe, Africa and Asia.

In celebration of 20 years of service to the photographic community, The Friends' two-part anniversary exhibition reflects developments in photography during the past two decades and celebrates the organization's commitment to presenting a wide range of artistic styles and thematic concerns.

The Twentieth Anniversary Exhibition, Part One includes selected photographs by artists who were shown in solo and group exhibitions at The Friends between 1967 and 1977. Individual panels present images by Eugene Atget, Lewis Baltz, Wynn Bullock, Marie Cosindas, Imogen Cunningham, Bruce Davidson, Emmet Gowin, Robert Heineken, Barbara Morgan, Aaron Siskind, Jerry Uelsmann, Todd Walker and Minor White.

One section of the gallery honors The Friends' inaugural exhibition, which contained photographs by Ansel Adams, Wynn Bullock, Imogen Cunningham, Dorothea Lange, Brett Weston, Edward Weston and Minor White, and laid the groundwork for the high standards that gallery would follow in the years to come.

The photographs chosen for this anniversary exhibition provide varying historical and aesthetic viewpoints, from images of Paris by the early 20th-century French photographer Eugene Atget to Lewis Baltz' stark, yet sumptuous, contemporary photographs of Southern California industrial parks.

The Friends' Twentieth Anniversary Exhibition, Part Two will survey the second decade of the organization's exhibition program and will open on Aug. 14.

Melissa Lofton is the daughter of Carmel artist Richard Lofton, who died in 1966. Her innovative painted lanterns illuminate several homes on the Monterey Peninsula. Her recent large project was the decoration of the Serra Ballroom of the Monterey Conference Center for the Brazilian Carnival, the first project of the Carmel Classic Arts Foundation of which she is a member of the board.

Lofton has also worked in manuscript illumination, murals, costume design, wall hangings and curtains as well as fabric design for clothing.

The Carmel Bach Festival banners designed by Lofton and Morrow can be viewed through July 31 in the Marjorie Evans Gallery in Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

Looking Down from Upper Trail

The man who designed this house loved wood. The exterior is cedar shingles. Powerful redwood beams project from the sides. Wide eaves extend on all sides, and even the drains are wood.

The main level of this three level house is one floor below the street. One passes under a redwood arbor and steps down 2 zig-zag flights of steps to a broad deck and the front door. Inside is a vast area of Mexican tile which leads through a short hall to the huge living and dining rooms. Natural redwood framed windows (all the windows are positive action casements) span the front and open to a spacious deck that crosses the entire house. From this vantage point you look across rooftops below you to a vista that includes Pt. Lobos and a large part of Carmel Bay.

The living room is an open plan with cathedral ceiling supported by redwood beams, a great fireplace on the south, a skylight and track lighting.

The kitchen, all hand made redwood cabinets, is opposite the dining area. It's large, 18x11.5, and completely equipped. There's a half-bath near the entrance.

4 bedrooms and 4 baths branch off this center in several directions and on 3 levels. The master suite adjoins the living room on the same level and also shares the view of the sea. It's a bit more than 15 feet square and has an enormous bath with two sinks, a giant tub and glassed in shower. A fireplace is located on the north wall, and a door opens out to the wide deck.

There are 2 more large bedrooms and baths on the lower level, both carpeted, both with spacious baths, each equipped with a private deck. The 4th bedroom (and its own bath) is on the top level. A set of sliding doors opens from it to a birds' eye view of the living and dining rooms. The garage is also on this upper level.

The house is brand new, 3400 sq. ft., a modern design throughout, blending the colors of redwood, oak, Mexican tile and white plaster walls. It has an open, airy feeling, and in its location at 24722 Upper Trail gives you a grand sense of being "above it all." The price is $510,000.

CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 21

There is a lady with the improbable name of Gladys Georgiana Green who lives on Carmel Point. She's had a home here since 1937, and she very seldom leaves it. She's about 5 feet tall, has mischievous blue eyes and a voice you will never forget. When her long-time friend and director, Frank Capra, called her some months ago and asked her to be his special guest at a luncheon given in his honor, she turned him down without hesitation; not that she doesn't adore Mr. Capra, but she hates publicity. In her long career, she has played opposite Gary Cooper, Jimmy Stewart, Cary Grant, Clark Gable, the Barrymores, Alan Ladd and other headliners. You'll remember her in Shane, You Can't Take it with You, Mr. Smith Goes to Washington and dozens of other films. And you'll remember her as Peter Pan on Broadway, as a professor of drama at Vassar and North Carolina State, and as a television actress. She was born in Plattsburg, N.Y. in (the record is blurred here), started a modelling career in New York, and accepted a contract in Hollywood. Her first hit was The Saturday Night Kid with Clara Bow. Fox Films and Paramount missed her appeal, and it took MGM to make her a major star. It's a pleasure to salute JEAN ARTHUR, one of Carmel's proudest legends.
